Senate Votes 68 to 9 for Boost in Pay Of President

Move for Increase For 7600 District Employes Killed; New Try Is Slated

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

The Senate last night voted, 68 to 9, to boost the pay of the President, Vice President and Speaker of the House.

Before passage, the Senate had removed from the bill all other pay increases, including those for 7600 classified District employes, for Cabinet officers and some 200 other top-ranking Federal positions and for the District Commissioners. The bill was trimmed by a vote of 84-2.

Provides $100,000 Salary

The bill would give the President a $100,000 annual salary, in place of his present $75,000. It would also give him a $50,000 annual expense allowance, for which he would not have to account, and which would be tax free. This would be given in addition to a $40,000 annual allowance he now gets for travel and entertainment. The Vice President and Speaker would each get a $30,000 annual salary, plus a $10,000 annual expense allowance for which they would not have to account, and which would be tax free.

Senator Forrest C. Donnell (R., Mo.) sharply attacked the idea of not having the three officials account in detail for their expense allowances. His amendment to require such accounting was beaten by a 61-to-22 roll-call vote. A tie vote, 38 to 38, later blocked a proposal by Senator Eugene D. Millikin (R., Colo.) to make the President give certified but not-itemized reports of what expense money he actually used.

Passage came at 7:35 p. m. after a seven-hour debate. It was the first bill passed by the Senate this year.

Flanders Makes Appeal

The pay boosts for District employes and for the Federal policy makers were promptly gathered into a new bill and introduced in the Senate by Senators Scott W. Lucas (D., Ill.), Herbert R. O'Conor (D., Md.), Ralph E. Flanders (R., Vt.) and Raymond E. Baldwin (R., Conn.).

Senator Flanders made a special appeal, and proposed an amendment to back it up, for including the District employes in the pay bill. His proposal called for keeping in the bill the section recom-

School Ruled In Contempt on Race Charge

Failure to Abide By Injunction in Gloucester Cited

Richmond, Va., Jan. 13 (AP).—Federal District Judge Sterling Hutcheson today found the Gloucester County School Board and its division superintendent in contempt of an order he had issued against discrimination in Gloucester's white and Negro schools.

He deferred imposition of penalties until April and said he would take into consideration any further steps toward equalization made in the interval.

A Federal judge's power to sentence a person for contempt is limited only by his own discretion.

Judge Hutcheson, in an 18-page opinion which he read before attorneys in his court here, made it plain he thought the board had tried to comply with his order.

School Officials Named

However, he ruled it had not tried hard enough to purge it of the contempt charge brought by Negro attorneys who represented Negro school children in the case against the board.

Standing liable for punishment now are J. Walter Kenney, division superintendent of Gloucester schools, and the school board members—Stanley T. Gray, chairman, and Wallace Fletcher and Otis Howge.

The judge said the board had "lacked in diligence" and that its members appeared to "consider themselves clothed with immunity because they do not have the money with which to erect a new building" for the Negro students.

The judge said:

"It would seem the defendants may not fully realize the position in which they find themselves. They point to a lack of funds, the fact that they have no power to levy taxes, and insist that they have been unable to erect new buildings. They then rely upon the Virginia law providing for segregated schools."

Lacked In Diligence

"Then, having set in motion preliminary plans to erect a new building, they await developments, ignoring their liability under the injunction order.

"They have called no public meeting to enlist the interests of the people of the county in the bond issue which they suggested. They have lacked in diligence in undertaking to obtain signatures to

Senate Votes 4-Day Holiday For Inaugural

The Senate last night voted to give Federal employes in the metropolitan area a four-day weekend for President Truman's inauguration after sharp sniping from the Republican minority.

The McGrath resolution, which will go to the House for probable action on Monday, would give all Government employes in Greater Washington a holiday on Thursday and Friday, January 20 and 21. They already have Saturday and Sunday off.

It was brought to the floor by "unanimous consent" of the Senate and passed by voice vote after cries of "waste" and "extravagance" were raised by Republican members.

Senator Wayne Morse (R., Ore.) said the inauguration, "in many ways will take on the character of a Roman holiday," but added that Government employes should share in it.

He called the inauguration "a fitting introduction to what has every evidence of becoming anything but an economical administration."

Senator Scott W. Lucas (D., Ill.), assistant majority floor leader, who asked unanimous consent to consider the bill, replied:

"The truth is that Democrats had nothing to do with $100,000 being spent here today."

Morse retorted, "You can't shuffle off the responsibility quite that easily"; to which Lucas replied, "I'm doing it."

The Oregon Senator then said the Kentucky calliope which will bring up the rear of the Inaugural Parade had not been contracted for by the Republicans.

Lucas said if he had his way, the oath-taking would be held on the new White House balcony which Mr. Truman was criticized for building.

That way, he said, "anybody who wanted to could get a real belly laugh."

Tug Operators Bow to Union, Strike Averted

Agreement Reached In N. Y. on Contested Overtime Provision

New York, Jan. 13 (NYHT).—An agreement reached at 11 o'clock tonight by tugboat employers and workers in City Hall averted a strike scheduled to begin at 12:01 a. m. tomorrow.

Mayor William O'Dwyer announced the settlement between Local 333, United Marine Division of the International Longshoremen's Association and the Marine Towing and Transportation Employers Association after representatives of the two organizations held a short meeting to clear up an overtime issue, the only obstacle that stood in way of settlement since the union terminated negotiations at 7 a. m. this morning.

The last-minute accord wiped out the threat of a stoppage of distribution of a major portion of the city's fuel oil and coal and assured a continuance of the port's busy shipping activity without interruption. The agreement is subject to ratification by a mail vote of Local 333's 3500 members, but this seemed certain tonight since the entire 26-man negotiating committee is pledged to support it.

Terms of the agreement call for a 12 per cent wage increase and other benefits including the overtime provision and a seniority clause insisted upon by the union. The 12 per cent wage hike was the fourth boost offered by the employers in the last four weeks. Previous offers called for 3, 6 and 10 per cent increases.

The overtime provision, bitterly fought by the operators, was conceded late this afternoon in a meeting of the representatives of the 81 companies that operate the 400 harbor craft that would have been tied up by a walkout. The provision calls for payment of a minimum of time-and-a-half for a half hour for each time a man off-watch is called to perform a special task such as handling tow lines.

Evacuation Of Nanking Is Expected

All Transportation Facilities Reported Commandeered for Southward Move

By Chang Kuo-sin

Nanking, Jan. 13 (U.P.).—The government commandeered all transportation today for wholesale evacuation of Nanking as the military situation worsened. Shells reportedly fell on Peiping for the first time, and the fate of Tientsin was in doubt.

A usually reliable source said all of Nanking's transportation facilities would be devoted to moving out government personnel, archives, equipment and materials, beginning this weekend, because of the increased threat to the capital.

It was understood the government plans called for moving to Formosa, Canton and other parts of South China, to reduce drastically personnel in offices which will remain to the last, and to evacuate completely the nonessential offices.

The evacuation of Nanking has been going on since last November. A qualified source denied today that instructions had been issued to all government offices to quit Nanking immediately, but said both the Sun Fo government and the Kuomintang (government party) initiated emergency discussions on stepping up the evacuation.

The new measures were taken chiefly as a result of the destruction of Gen. Tu Li-ming's three army groups in the pocket below Suchow, 175 miles north of Nanking. These troops were defending the Yangtze River line protecting Nanking and Shanghai.

Communists to Punish Gen. Tu as War Criminal

Shanghai, Jan. 13 (AP).—The Chinese Communists announced tonight they would punish the captured Gen. Tu Li-ming as a war criminal.

Assorted peace plans continued to preoccupy most of Nationalist China.

In Peiping, a source claiming to be "in the know" gave Associated Press Correspondent Spencer Moosa what he described as actual conditions offered by the Communists.

The terms were said to include: ouster of Generalissimo Chiang and Vice President Li Tsung-Jen; abandonment of the government constitution; a cease-fire at present positions; punishment of "war criminals"; and establishment of a "coalition government."

Reports from Communist-besieged Tientsin said the Reds had rejected a second plea by the

Many Reappointments

Truman Sends 170 Names To Senate for Confirmation

CARL A. HATCH | JAMES BOYD | JUDGE E. A. TAMM

President Truman yesterday nominated Hatch to be United States District Judge for New Mexico; Boyd to be director of the Bureau of Mines; and Tamm to be United States District Judge for the District of Columbia

President Truman yesterday sent to the Senate 170 nominations, many of them reappointments of Federal officials which the Republican-controlled Eightieth Congress failed to confirm.

A new nomination was that of former Democratic Senator Carl A. Hatch (N. M.), to be United States district judge for his State. Hatch did not seek reelection last year and his Senate seat was won by former Secretary of Agriculture Clinton P. Anderson.

Among the nominations, held up by the Eightieth Congress and which Mr. Truman sent to the Democratic-controlled Senate were:

James Boyd to be director of the Bureau of Mines. Boyd, who was opposed by United Mine Workers Chief John L. Lewis, has been serving without pay for more than a year.

Roy W. Harper, one of Mr. Truman's home State political friends, to be a Federal judge for the Eastern and Western Districts of Missouri.

Mr. Truman also nominated Gen. Omar N. Bradley, Army chief of staff, for promotion from his per-

Senators Are Told His Public and Private Record Both Refute Detractors

Post Reporter

Dean Acheson hit back at his detractors yesterday for suggesting that he might conduct a weak or appeasing foreign policy as Secretary of State.

"I think I know something of the need in American foreign policy for steadiness and continuity," he said at a dramatic open hearing of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

"The things that I read about myself as an appeaser seem to me so incredible that I cannot believe that even disinterested malevolence could think them up."

Stands on Record

He told the committee that his entire public and professional record disproved the attitudes that had been charged to him.

He avowed his continuing friendship for Donald and Alger Hiss, but said Alger had never been his assistant in the State Department. He told the committee that former Assistant Secretary Adolf A. Berle, jr., had confused the two brothers in testimony that aroused the House Un-American Activities Committee last year.

For almost two hours Acheson answered questions quietly, patiently, but now and then with acid in his words. The big caucus room was jammed with press and public.

Hearing Sets Precedent

Research by the Senate library failed to turn up a single precedent, in all American history, for a public hearing over anyone's confirmation as Secretary of State.

There was no doubt after yesterday's hearing that the committee would approve Acheson's nomination without delay. Chairman Tom Connally (D., Texas), said his Committee probably would vote this morning, with the prospect that the Senate would confirm him early next week, and that Acheson could be sworn in on Inauguration Day.

Acheson seemed relieved and took a long breath when Connally asked him about his reported close association with Alger Hiss.

"I have waited a long time for an opportunity to answer this question," Acheson began.

"As a preliminary matter, I should like to state to the committee that my friendship is not easily given and it is not easily withdrawn.

Friendship Continues

"In this instance Donald Hiss was my assistant in the years when I was Assistant Secretary of State. He served me and served his country with complete fidelity and loyalty. He and I became, and we remain, close and intimate friends. He is now my partner, with everything that that relationship implies.

"Alger Hiss was an officer of the Department of State during most of the time that I served there. During this time he and I became friends and we remain friends.

"I do not wish to detract in any way from that statement when I

Atomic Board Stands Pat in Graham Case

Won't Deny Advisers Urged Secrets Be Kept From University Head

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The Atomic Energy Commission last night refused to budge from its position taken a month ago giving clearance for Dr. Frank P. Graham, president of the University of North Carolina, for access to atomic secrets.

Graham

The commission was accused late Wednesday by a radio commentator, Fulton Lewis, jr., of having overridden its security officials in clearing Graham.

Lewis charged that both the AEC five-man Security Advisory Board, headed by former Supreme Court Justice Owen J. Roberts, and the AEC Security Officer Rear Admiral John E. Gingrich had protested Graham's clearance.

Outside of saying that "the commission believes that the decision it made was the right one," its members refused to comment on the allegations.

Strength from a powerful source was given the commission's position late yesterday, when President Truman told his news conference that he had utmost confidence in the North Carolina educator. The President indicated that the Lewis' charges were incorrect, when he remarked that he doubted whether there was any objection to Graham.

Truman Asks Tax Rise Start At $6000 Level

Incomes of Middle Bracket Begin With That Figure, He Says

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

President Truman indicated yesterday that he believes the higher taxes he has recommended ought to start with incomes of $6000 a year.

Talking to reporters at a White House news conference, Mr. Truman said he did not now subscribe to the view held by the late Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1942-43 that all salaries ought to be limited to $25,000 after taxes.

In his State of the Union message Mr. Truman told Congress that in bringing in four billion dollars of additional revenue it should give consideration to "raising personal income tax rates in the middle and upper brackets."

What do you consider the middle and upper brackets?" a reporter asked the President yesterday.

Mr. Truman replied that the Treasury Department considers the middle bracket to include incomes starting at about $6000 and ranging up to $25,000 or $30,000 a year. Anything beyond that, he said, would be in the upper bracket.

The Chief Executive, smiling, said that it was a matter of the point of view. A person getting $6000 a year, he said, would probably feel that the middle bracket ought to start around $10,000 a year.

"Mr. President," said the reporter, "the point which brings this up is that the late President Roosevelt, I believe, held that the view that an income of $25,000 a year ought to be a maximum take-home pay. Is that your view also?"

Mr. Truman replied that if a

Odom Sets Record But Falls Short Of Nonstop Goal

San Francisco, Jan. 13 (AP).—Bill Odom crossed the Pacific from Honolulu to set a new light plane record today but landed at the Oakland airport at 6:38 p. m. (PST) (9:38 p. m., EST) after giving up his effort to fly on to New York nonstop.

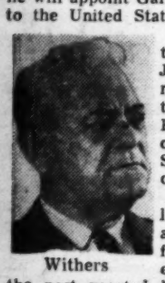
He already had broken the Russian record of 2061.703 miles when his single-engined Beechcraft Bonanza plane winged over the Golden Gate at 4:27 p. m. (PST).

His plane had been aloft 22 hours and 6 minutes when it settled neatly to the Oakland runway tonight. He took off from Honolulu at 11:32 p. m. (EST) yesterday.

His original goal was 5285 miles nonstop but headwinds cut his fuel supply.

Withers Chosen To Fill Barkley's Seat in Senate

Frankfort, Ky., Jan. 13 (AP).—Gov. Earle Clements today announced he will appoint Garrett L. Withers to the United States Senate.



Withers

At the same time, he said John Keck commonwealth's attorney at Sandy Hook, will succeed Withers as State highway commissioner.

Withers, 64, a lifelong personal and political friend of Clements, will fill the post vacated by Vice President-elect Alben W. Barkley. Barkley has resigned the Senate post, effective January 19. He becomes Vice President the following day.

Withers, native of Webster County, has been active in Democratic Party affairs for many years although he has held only one elective office. He served three years as Circuit Court clerk in Webster County before resigning to begin the practice of law.

He left his law firm at Dixon two years ago to become State commissioner of highways in the Clements administration.

Israel, Egypt Begin Talks; Truman Denies British Strain

U. S. Policy Remains As Set Forth in U. N., President Declares

(From Press Dispatches)

President Truman denied yesterday that British-American relations were strained as the result of the British-Israeli row over the shooting down of five British planes.

Mr. Truman also denied a British report that the British planes were over Palestine as the result of a United States request for information on the fighting there.

Mr. Truman said the American position on Israel and the Palestine controversy remained that set forth in the United Nations Assembly November 20. At that time Philip C. Jessup said it was the desire of the United States to maintain its "historic ties of friendship" with all people of the Middle East and to "see them reconcile their differences."

The President's denials came near the close of a day filled with activity over the Palestine question both here and in London.

Before his late press conference, the President had spent 30 minutes discussing Palestine with British Ambassador Sir Oliver Franks.

Mr. Truman had no comment on the meeting. Franks said he had "submitted the views of my government" to President Truman. He added he had covered the same ground he had gone over with Undersecretary of State Lovett Wednesday.

Mr. Truman's strong denial that the United States had asked Brit-

Question of Agenda Lineup Is Disposed of Without Argument

By Kenneth Bilby

Rhodes, Jan. 13 (NYHT).—Armistice negotiations between Egypt and Israel began here today under the chairmanship of Dr. Ralph J. Bunche, acting United Nations Palestine mediator.

Military and political leaders of the two states faced each other across a table and made surprising preliminary progress in their initial 30-minute session.

The question of the order in which various disputes would be dealt with was disposed of without argument and the delegation leaders from both states declared unequivocally that their sole purpose was to end the war in Palestine. Dr. Bunche described the gathering as "one of great and hopeful significance."

The fear of some Israeli leaders that Egypt would demand troop withdrawal in the Negev desert before considering peace were dissipated by the Egyptian acceptance of the principle that each dispute must be dealt with in relation to the over-all subject of an armistice. Such questions as the disposition of the trapped Faluja garrison will thus be considered in relation to the final demarcation line and removal of opposing armies.

Authoritative neutral sources said the agenda included establishment of a general armistice.

In State of Union Message

Truman Says D. C. Home Rule Is Part of Civil Rights Plan

President Truman told his weekly press conference yesterday that his recommendation for home rule for the District was included in the civil rights section of his recent State of the Union address.

"I understand," a reporter asked, "that there has been some disappointment here because you failed to recommend home rule for the District of Columbia in the State of the Union message. Last time you recommended it in the civil rights message."

Mr. Truman replied that he thought it was included in the civil rights reference in the State of the Union message and he thought it was thoroughly covered. He said civil rights were referred to and made a part of the message on the State of the Union.

In his State of the Union message to Congress January 5, the President said:

"The civil rights proposals I made to the Eightieth Congress, I now repeat to the Eighty-first Congress. They should be enacted in order that the Federal Government may assume the leadership and discharge the obligations clearly placed upon it by the Constitution.

I stand squarely behind those proposals."

Mr. Truman, the first Chief Executive to indorse District suffrage in all the years Washington has lacked it, last February presented a 10-point civil rights program to Congress in which he said:

"I am in full accord with the principle of local self-government for residents of the District of Columbia. In addition, I believe that the Constitution should be amended to extend suffrage in presidential elections to the residents of the District."

Extra-Marital Love Life Costs Mother Custody of Daughters

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 13 (U.P.).—The State's highest court denied custody of her two teen-age daughters today to a mother who had frankly stated that she believed a dissatisfied wife had a right to indulge in extra-marital sex experiments.

The Court of Appeals reversed lower tribunals which granted custody of the girls to Mrs. Ethel Bunim, divorced by Dr. Louis A. Bunim of New York in February, 1947.

The court voted 4-2 to place the children in the father's custody.

In a majority opinion, Associate Judge Charles S. Desmond said:

"Defendant (Mrs. Bunim) here, in open court, has stated her considered belief in the propriety of indulgence, by a dissatisfied wife such as herself, in extra-marital sex experimentations.

"It cannot be said that the best interest and welfare of those impressionable teen-age girls will be best served by awarding their custody to one who proclaims, and lives by, such extraordinary ideas of right conduct.

"On the trial of this divorce suit the wife admitted numerous deliberate adulteries, attempted to rationalize and justify these adulteries, denied any repentance therefor, committed perjury in swearing to denials in her answer, and, as found by courts below, testified to a deliberately false story as to consent by plaintiff (a reputable and successful physician) to the adulteries.

"No court welcomes such problems, or feels at ease in deciding them," Judge Desmond wrote. "But a decision there must be and it cannot be one repugnant to all normal concepts of sex, family and marriage."

Desmond criticized the ruling of the lower courts which was based presumably on "testimony of the two daughters that, though they love their father, they prefer to live with their mother."

Hildreth, Inauguration Chairman, Divides Interest Between Donkey and Elephant

The Democratic donkey and the circus elephant have shared the lifelong interest of Melvin D. Hildreth, chairman of the presidential inauguration committee.

Hildreth was born and reared as a Democrat in Fargo, N. Dak., where Democrats are as few in number and as hard-shelled as the Vermont variety.

MELVIN D. HILDRETH
A born Democrat

He fell in love with an elephant, Rajah, at the age of seven when he visited his first circus, the stellar and sen-say-shun-al of the Lemon Brothers. He's been infatuated with circuses and elephants ever since.

It's particularly fitting that Hildreth should make the arrangements for the inaugural of President Truman. Both are circus fans. Hildreth, oft-times called the Nation's No. 1 Circus Fan, lists Truman along with Abe Lincoln and Woodrow Wilson as the most enthusiastic circus fans of all our Presidents.

Shortly after attending the Lemon Bros. spectacle, Hildreth and a playmate organized Davis and Upshaw Circus, charging anything from pins to pennies for admission. They named their show after their middle names, Melvin Davis Hildreth and Lynn Upshaw Stambaugh. The "Upshaw" half of the circus venture is currently a director of the Export-Import Bank.

The big top fascinated the 5-foot-6 Dakotan. Years later he organized the Circus Fans of America, and served as its president for a couple of years. During the depression, Hildreth was active in keeping the circus alive. He took a personal interest in Hart's Circus, even to playing a drum in the band and serving as barker for the side show. Circus folk in distress just naturally head for "Doc"—circus jargon for a fellow with glasses—and "Doc" takes in as many shows as he can get to, even travelling cross-country to do so.

Of course, Hildreth had to think of bread as well as circuses. After getting an academic background at Fargo College and a law degree at Columbia, he tried practicing law and converting Dakotans to the Democratic Party. He served in World War I with AEF artillery, rose to lieutenant.

Hildreth came to Washington in 1919 to help in the formation of the Wilson Independent League, has stayed here ever since, a champion of the Democratic Party, of civic projects and of home rule.

For a brief interval, Hildreth quit law for a fling at the stage as a member of the Garrick Players, a stock company that trod the boards of the old Garrick Theater, which once stood on the site of Hecht's. Other members of that company were Edna May Oliver, Dennis King, and Hardie Meekin, now manager of Keith's Theater.

Aside from politics and circuses, Hildreth's interests are varied and far-flung. He's a director of a number of corporations, including one that operates in India. He's chairman of the Chinese Community Church here; a director of the American Association for United Nations; chairman of the American Committee for the Restoration of St. Die, France; and active in other international groups.

He's had some little experience with inaugurations, too, having participated on one committee or another preparing the first three for Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

Soon after coming to Washington, Hildreth married Jean Calvert Tighe, of Marlboro, Md. They've four children—Jean, 23; David, 22; Richard, 20; and Bobby, 7—and live at 4831 Indian Lane, Spring Valley.

Hildreth's friends say he has a memory like an elephant. By that they mean that Hildreth never forgets a name, place, or incident. But Hildreth himself doesn't think highly of the elephant's long-established reputation for a long memory.

Hildreth, who's 58, points out that he's known Modoc, the Ringling Bros.' elephant, for more than 30 years now, and she never once has given indication of recognizing her admirer of three decades.

Constitutional Poll Tax Ban Is Proposed

Ten Democratic Senators, eight of them Southerners, suggested yesterday that poll taxes be outlawed by a constitutional amendment rather than by legislation as President Truman proposed.

Such an amendment would require approval by 36 of the 48 States.

Their resolution was introduced after Senator Hubert H. Humphrey (D., Minn.), urged Republicans and liberal Democrats to unite behind Mr. Truman's racial rights program.

The President has called for legislation to abolish the poll tax as a voting requirement in seven States—Alabama, Arkansas, Mississippi, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia—as well as measures to halt lynching and insure fair job treatment for all races.

On the question of poll taxes, Southern Democrats long have maintained that it is unconstitutional for Congress to interfere with the rights of States. Some northern Democrats and Republicans back this stand.

A constitutional amendment requires a two-thirds majority in both houses of Congress. It then must be ratified by three fourths of the States. There are enough Southern and border States to defeat such an amendment if they all turn it down.

The resolution was filed by Senator Spessard L. Holland (Fla.) for himself and Senators Walter F. George (Ga.), Tom Connally (Tex.), Allen J. Ellender (La.), Russell B. Long (La.), Clyde R. Hoey (N. C.), J. Melville Broughton (N. C.), A Willis Robertson (Va.), Millard E. Tydings (Md.) and Herbert R. O'Conor (Md.).

Humphrey recalled that both parties backed racial rights legislation in their 1948 platforms, and said:

"There are enough votes in Congress to enact the whole program if the people who have indorsed it vote their convictions."

3 Senators Boost New Health Plan

Senator Pepper (D., Fla.) said yesterday that he and two colleagues are seeking President Truman's go-ahead on a vast new public health program.

The Florida lawmaker told a reporter the group is urging the Administration to back a single piece of legislation which would wrap up Mr. Truman's national health insurance plan with a half dozen other related proposals.

Pepper and Senators Murray (D., Mont.) and Humphrey (D., Minn.) already have discussed the idea with Federal Security Administrator Oscar R. Ewing, it was learned. Ewing reportedly promised to study the matter and decide whether to take it up with the President.

Pepper said that, besides health insurance, such an omnibus bill would provide for:

1. Increased Federal aid for hospital construction.
2. Medical research.
3. Federal aid to medical schools and students.
4. A nurse recruiting program.
5. Expansion of the U. S. Public Health Service.
6. A dental program.

On the House side, Representative Miller (R., Nebr.) yesterday introduced a bill providing for a Federal department of national health and welfare, to be headed by a Cabinet officer.

Miller said 44 separate Federal agencies spent 1¼ billion dollars on medical services in 1948.

"It would seem that it is high time to bring all these agencies under one umbrella in order to eliminate duplication, waste and inefficiency," he said.

The Pepper-backed proposal for one big health measure is getting Administration study.

Farmers Are Satisfied

Chicago, Jan. 13 (AP).—There is no cry for Government medical service from the vast majority of the midle-class people, the Journal of the American Medical Association said today.

"Nor is there any insistent demand for this legislation from rural groups," it added.

In an editorial, the journal criticized President Truman's recommendation in his State of the Union message to Congress for a system of prepaid medical-health insurance.

The journal said this would be "nationalized, bureaucratic, governmental or socialized medical care." It added it would bring "inadequate, bad and improper" medical service. The editorial said:

"The President says that we are short of doctors, hospitals and nurses. Actually the United States . . . has more doctors in proprtion to the population than any other country in the world, whether with or without a system of socialized medicine."

It said "economic factors" which need to be remedied are responsible for an inadequate distribution of physicians and a shortage of hospitals.

Full Authority for President In Reorganization Is Urged

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The Hoover Commission yesterday asked Congress to give President Truman sweeping authority to reorganize the Government, subject only to a congressional "veto."

President Truman, it was learned, plans to back up the recommendtion with a message to Congress asking the new merger authority.

Herbert Hoover, chairman of the commission on Government organization, said the United States is now "paying heavily for a lack of order, a lack of clear lines of authority and responsibility, and a lack of effective organization in the executive branch."

In a letter to the presiding officers of both houses, Hoover said the President's reorganization powers, allowed to die last March by the Eightieth Congress, should be renewed without agency exemptions and restrictions that studded the old law.

Congressional reaction was generally favorable. Speaker Sam Rayburn (D., Tex.) said he thought the proposal would be "pretty well received."

Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) said he "had no particular objection." Taft added, however, that some members of Congress would like to substitute affirmative action on any merger plans the President submits for the old method of allowing them to become law unless both Houses disapprove.

Senator George D. Aiken (R., Vt.), a member of the commission, said Mr. Truman needs a lot of leeway in reorganizing agencies "in order to be a good President." Aiken said he favored the concurrent resolution method of disapproving merger plans, recommended by Hoover, over direct legislative action by Congress, because "it's the only way you would get any action."

Senator John L. McClellan (D., Ark.), who is also a member of the Hoover Commission, is understood to be drafting a bill to give the President "continuing" power to overhaul the Government, instead of limiting the authority to a fixed period. McClellan is chairman of the Senate Expenditures Committee, which would handle the legislation in the Senate.

Many Reforms Needed

The Hoover Commission pointed out in its letter that while many reforms will require legislative action, a part of them could be accomplished by voting the President reorganizing authority.

Opposing "limitations or exemptions" on this authority, it said such restrictions would "end the possibility of achieving really substantial results."

"In saying this, the commission should not be understood as giving sweeping indorsement to any and all reorganization plans," Hoover wrote.

"It does believe that the safeguard against unwise reorganization plans lies in both a sound exercise of the President's discretion and in the reserved power in the Congress by concurrent resolution to disapprove any proposed plan.

"Limitations or exemptions upon this power to reorganize should not be imposed other than that of congressional disapproval."

Keleher Asks Court To Drop Wife's Suit

By Jean Reiff
Post Reporter

Counsel for John B. Keleher, once convicted gambler, yesterday asked that his wife's suit for a limited divorce on grounds of cruelty be dismissed for lack of evidence.

"If there was any cruelty, it was that he was probably trying to kill her with kindness," Attorney Alvin Newmyer asserted.

Mrs. Anna T. Keleher's charges were based on "uncorroborated testimony," he declared, arguing there was no evidence to support the charges but many "insignificant and irrelevant insinuations."

"They were getting along all right before she sent him off to Florida in 1946, then attempted to strip him of all his possessions, locked him out of their apartment and refused to let him come back. He let her have everything her heart desired and that is the treatment he got," Newmyer declared.

As the lawyer spoke, tears welled in the eyes of the white-haired defendant, who is 67. His brunette wife, who is 51, stared impassively at Judge Edward Tamm.

Newmyer also asked that Mrs. Keleher's suit for maintenance be dismissed on the rounds that if she is denied her divorce, she has not proved her right to leave the defendant and therefore has no right to support from him.

He informed Judge Tamm that if her suit is dismissed he will ask that Keleher's countersuit for limited divorce on the same grounds be dismissed without prejudice.

"At the time she filed suit in 1947, the two-year time limit for desertion had not elapsed and we had to countersue also on cruelty. But if these cases are dismissed, we will file suit for asolute divorce on grounds of desertion," Newmyer informed Judge Tamm.

A Blonde Interrupts

As Newmyer, in his argument, declared that Mrs. Keleher has never accounted for $50,000 in cash, representing the difference between the $30,000 she says she took from their safety deposit boxes in 1946 and the $80,000 Keleher says she took, an unidentified blonde woman interrupted from the back of the courtroom.

"I object. It was only $34,000. I was with her and I saw it," she yelled. Judge Tamm ordered her removed from the courtroom. Mrs. Keleher's lawyer, James J. Laughlin, said later he had no idea who the woman was.

Earlier in yesterday's hearing, Laughlin asked that Judge Tamm declare two Maryland police chiefs, whom he had subpenaed, to be "hostile witnesses" before he put them on the stand.

The witnesses were Maj. Ralph Brown, superintendent of Prince Georges County police, and Chief Eugene B. Plumer of Mount Rainier police. Mrs. Keleher has charged that both have been "protecting" her husband, while he continues to run a gambling establishment at 3205 Rhode Island ave. ne., Mount Rainier, Md.

Police Chiefs Not Called

Because the two men were not parties to the suits, Judge Tamm refused to declare them "hostile witnesses" until he had observed their demeanor on the stand. Laughlin then declined to call then.

When Brown and Plumer were informed that they had been excused they declared they had come prepared to answer all questions willingly.

Most of the day was spent in questioning Mrs. Dorothy Blake, 44, against whom Mrs. Keleher has filed a $250,000 alienation of affections suit.

Mrs. Blake said she has been friends with Keleher for 12 or 14 years, but denied emphatically that she loved him or intended to marry him.

Just a Coincidence

She said she had seen Keleher on several occasions in Florida, Atlantic City and New York, but that she had never made any trips with him or planned to meet him at any of those spots.

It was "purely coincidence," she said, that she and Keleher had adjoining rooms in an Atlantic City hotel in September, 1946, when they were arrested on a warrant, charging adultery, which Mrs. Keleher had sworn out against them. They were acquitted of the charges.

Mrs. Blake admitted that in January, 1946, she made a number of long-distance telephone calls to the Rhode Island address from the Hialeah race track in Florida and that she called the same place from Salem, N. H., near the Rockingham track in September, 1948.

The calls were made to George Pearson to ask him about tips on the horses, she said. Keleher had testified earlier that he turned over his business to Pearson when he retired in January, 1948.

She denied emphatically that she had even been questioned by a Laurel, Md., race track official because in the fall of 1946, she had made an unusual number of phone calls from the track and had bet very large sums of money there, as Mrs. Keleher charged.

Mrs. Blake admitted that Keleher had made numerous long distance calls from her apartment at the Dorchester and had never reimbursed her in cash for them.

"He never paid me in money, but I considered the calls paid for by the many times he has taken me to dinner," she explained.

She admitted that shortly before the trial opened January 4, Keleher turned over a check for $10,750 to her to deposit it in a special account in the bank where she keeps a checking account.

"He was leaving town the night he received the check and told me me was in a hurry to have it cleared, so he asked me to take it to my bank the next day," she explained.

The hearing will resume today at 1:45 p. m., when Laughlin will answer Newmyer's arguments for dismissal of Mrs. Keleher's suits.

2 Held in Sale Of $5000 in Bogus Money

By The Associated Press

The Secret Service announced the arrest of two men by its agents in New York early yesterday on charges of possessing and selling $5000 in counterfeit money.

Chief U. E. Baughman said they sold that much bogus $10 and $20 bills to an undercover agent of the service who posed as an underworld buyer.

The men were identified as Salvatore Nicola Coppola, 42, and Daniel Capra, 38, both of New York.

The counterfeit notes were said to be of an issue which the Secret Service three weeks ago said were circulating actively in New York and Chicago.

They purport to be notes of the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago.

Previously, the service had arrested one man at Baltimore on a charge of possessing about $1600 in bogus bills of the same issue.

Baughman said the men arrested in New York refused to reveal the source from which they obtained the counterfeits.

The entire counterfeit activties of the Secret Service have been stepped up noticeably in recent weeks. Four men were recently seized at Chicago on charges of possessing equipment for making counterfeits. Officials said the Chicago arrests came before equipment had been put into actual production.

House to Push Trade Powers Of President

Speaker Rayburn indicated yesterday that extension of the President's reciprocal trade powers will spearhead the Administration's program in the House.

House Ways and Means Chairman Robert L. Doughton (D., N. C.) meanwhile announced hearings will open January 24 on a two-year extension of the trade act.

The House will complete its committee organization Monday or Tuesday, Rayburn indicated. At that time a Democratic caucus will be called to approve Democratic Committee assignments recommended by Democratic members of the House Ways and Means Committee.

Mrs. McCollum 'Neutral' on Theologies

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

MRS. VASHTI McCOLLUM
Gives her views

An Illinois mother of three children whose name has become a symbol of conflict in religious debates across the Nation yesterday returned to the scene of her "triumph."

Last March, by an 8-to-1 vote upholding her suit, the Supreme Court inscribed the name McCollum on its list of the most significant cases in court history.

But instead of ending the dispute, this decision, which banned the use of school buildings for religious classes during school hours, served to intensify controversy over the "wall of separation" that the Supreme Court said must exist between church and state.

A small, serious, brown-haired woman, who looks much less than her 36 years, and in no way would appear to be a controversial figure, Mrs. Vashti McCollum believes there has been "deliberate distortion" of her case.

'Not Fighting Religion'

"I'm not an atheist," she declares, "but even if I were that has nothing to do with this issue. The issue I fought for was to keep the teaching of religion out of the public schools. I was not fighting religion.

"This is the point," she said, leaning across a dining room table at the Lee Sheraton Hotel, where she had had lunch with a dozen Washington area church figures, educators and others interested in hearing her state her case.

"My religious convictions are absolutely aside from the issue. Under the Constitution, if I want to distribute religious pamphlets, I can. But all the bishops in the United States can't force anyone to read them."

Mrs. McCollum attended Cornell University and the University of Illinois, studying political science and law. In addition to being a housewife, she is a part-time instructor in dancing for student activities at the University of Illinois, where her husband is an associate professor of plant physiology.

Begun Four Years Ago

It is now four years since she launched her attack on the plan whereby the Council of Religious Education at Champaign, Ill., was permitted by the school board to hold religious classes in the school buildings.

Pupils whose parents permitted it attended the classes, with teachers paid by the Catholic-Protestant-Jewish council. Her oldest son, James Terry, now 14, did not attend and generally sat in a room by himself during the classes.

While Mrs. McCollum has been generally termed a "Freethinker"—by those who did not call her an atheist—she said she does not fit the former classification either although her father, Arthur G. Crowell, is president of the Freethinkers Society of Rochester, N. Y.

Mrs. McCollum describes herself as a "humanist—I believe humans are intelligent, and they have capabilities, and they should develop these capabilities and retain to themselves as much ability as possible to cope with their own problems.

"I don't disclaim any theologies . . . I'm just neutral on the subject.

Wants Children's Questions

'But I won't have my children 'indoctrinated.'—Told, 'you take this on faith, you don't question it because it's in the Bible.' I want them to question things.

'A person is not good or bad because he's Methodist or Jewish . . . Humanists attempt to show what I feel is a common culture . . . For instance, Jesus is the greatest man that ever lived for he synthetized the best of all men"

Since the Supreme Court decision, Mrs. McCollum said she has more friends in Champaign than ever before, "but it is hard on the boys." Religious classes are now held in the schools after school hours, "and while still some imposition on the public school system, at least attendance now is a matter between the church and the parent, and the school doesn't enter into it."

While her children have been termed "problem children" by critics, "I think they're perfect . . . James Terry is a non-conformist, he doesn't like football like the other boys, but there's nothing wrong with that."

Dannel, 11, collects minerals, "which may not be normal—is it?" and Errol, 8, "has come in to tell me he told a neighbor's boy there is no God. I told him never to say that, to wait until he grows up and decide for himself."

Attend Sunday School

The children attend a Unitarian Sunday School in Urbana, and learn about "all religions," she said. But the oldest boy "has been in fights because other boys called his mother vile names, and he lost, because he's no fighter."

Since the case began, said Mrs. McCollum, she has received about 6000 letters, about three fifths of them agreeing with her. Some of the "anti" ones, she said, "are threatening, abusive, filthy and obscene."

Once, she said, someone threw garbage into the living room of their home, "and somebody always pulls the lights off our Christmas trees on the lawn outside."

Her case cost about $25,000 to finance, she said, of which a group called the Chicago Action Council put up all but $5000. "We put up $4000," she said, "and about $1000 came with letters in contributions ranging from 25 cents to $100."

Mrs. McCollum said she is preparing a book about her experiences, and has made a few public appearances, one in a Unitarian church pulpit, "but I'm not much of a public speaker."

She is now in Washington visiting with a college classmate.

Vote Supports Pastor Accused Of Intimacies

Glendale, Calif., Jan. 13 (AP).—The pastor of Glendale's largest church, accused by some of his flock of indiscretions with 40 feminine parishioners, reported today a unanimous vote of confidence from prayer meeting attendants last night.

Dr. James Whitcomb Brougher, jr., the 46-year-old father of four children, is accused in a Superior Court action of kissing young girl church members, having affairs with women members, visiting bookmakers and a variety of other charges.

Last night's vote of confidence came from the 211 in attendance—of a membership of 3000 in the First Baptist Church.

Dr. Brougher himself called the allegations "completely false."

Fickle Lover Lada Denied Bail

Berlin, Jan. 13 (U.P.).—A military government court today decided it had better keep Edward J. Lada, the inconstant lover from Newark, N. J., away from temptation.

It refused to release Lada on bail because he "cannot be trusted."

District Attorney Irving Robbins told the court that if Lada were released, "he'd probably wind up at Ursula Schmidt's house." He referred to the blonde fraulein who twice stole Lada's affections from the unwed mother of his child. Lada entered Germany illegally to marry the latter.

Cleared in Jail Death

Baltimore, Jan. 13 (AP).—Police Lieutenant Edward T. Coughlin was celared today of neglect of duty charges brought against him in connection with the death of a man booked on a drunkeness charge.

The prisoner, 50-year-old Charles Nitz' was arrested Sunday. He spent six hours in a cell before being moved to Maryland General Hospital. Six hours later, he died.

An autopsy performed Monday morning indicated Nitz died of a fractured skull, a hemorrhage and contusion of the brain. No alcohol was found in his system.

Lieutenant Coughlin was charged with violating a police department regulation by failing to send Nitz to a hosptal.

Police Commissioner Hamilton R. Atkinson dismissed the charges after hearing Dr. Frank N. Ogden, fire department surgeon, testify that absence of alcohol when the autopsy was performed did not mean Nitz was sober when arrested.

6000 POW's Used In Israel, U. N. Told

British Envoy At White House

Talks with Truman

Lake Success, Jan. 13 (AP)—Freda Kirchwey, president of the Nation Associates, today handed the United Nations a document saying Britain has released 6000 Nazi war prisoners to fight against Israel.

The document, described by Miss Kirchwey as a French intelligence report, was dated December 8, 1948. Copies were sent to U. N. Secretary-General Trygve Lie, President Truman and members of the Security Council.

Sir Alexander Cadogan, the British delegate, said he is convinced the charge is unfounded. The French delegate, Guy de la Tournelle, said he could not say if the document was a French intelligence report but that it was "quite improbable."

The report said:

1. The British had offered Nazi prisoners in Egypt 100 pounds ($400) each to volunteer for training to fight against Israel and up to the present 6000 had been recruited.

2. Former Nazi generals had been flown from the British zone in Germany to the Middle East in British military planes. Three of these generals were attached to the Iraqi-Trans-Jordan command in Palestine, the Syrian high command and the Lebanese high command, the report said.

Miss Kirchwey asked President Truman to make a direct investigation of the charges.

The Nation Associates is an organization which publishes the Nation magazine. Dr. Frank P. Graham, president of the University of North Carolina, is chairman. Other members include Thurmond W. Arnold, Representative Helen Gahagan Douglas (D., Calif.), Philip Murray, president of the CIO, and Eugene O'Neill.

Cairo Bomb Kills 2 and Injures 22

Cairo, Egypt, Jan. 13 (U.P.).—The quick thinking of an office boy in the police bureau of investigation averted a major tragedy today but two persons were killed and 22 injured in a bomb explosion in Sad El Khalk Square near the center of Cairo.

Police blamed the explosion on the outlawed Moslem Brotherhood, the organization of fanatical nationalists held responsible for the recent assassination of Premier Mahmoud Fahmy Nokrashy Pasha.

They said a youth named Shafik Anass who admitted membership in the brotherhood, brought the bomb into the bureau in a brief case.

Anass called for Saytmed Effendi, a secretary. Told by the unidentified office boy that Saytmed was out, Anass asked to leave a brief case for him.

The office boy, noting that Anass was extremely nervous and kept consulting his watch, hefted the "papers," decided they were not papers and ran after Anass, shouting for police.

Anass was arrested and a police bomb expert ordered the brief case taken outside.

The bomb exploded just outside the police building. It killed a policeman and a cigarette vendor and 6 policemen were among the 22 injured. Windows were smashed and other minor damage resulted.

Poland Executed Or Jailed 120,000

By the United Press

Former Polish Premier Stanislaw Mikolajczyk said here yesterday that more than 120,000 Poles were imprisoned or executed last year by the Communist-led Polish government.

He said 15,000 Poles trying to flee the country were arrested on the Polish frontier, but that another 30,000 managed to escape.

Reporting on a recent visit to Europe, he said Russia has ordered the metallurgical industry in Poland and Czechoslovakia to increase steel production as much as possible for the Soviet armed forces.

Blaze Fought 5 Hours

Betterton, Md., Jan. 13 (AP).—Firemen battled nearly five hours today before stopping flames which leveled a restaurant, general store and the postoffice of this summer resort town. Businessmen estimated damages at about $50,000, not including the contents of the three structures destroyed. Betterton is on the upper Chesapeake Bay at the mouth of the Sassafras River, opposite Havre de Grace.

Truman Denies British Strain

ain for information which necessitated British planes flying over Palestine was echoed by the United States State Department, which branded the report "entirely untrue."

A formal statement by the British Foreign Office said the flights were undertaken on Britain's own responsibility, but other British officials, who declined to be quoted by name, said Britain acted when the United States asked for proof of British claims Israeli had invaded Egypt.

It was this that brought the United States denials. Michael J. McDermott, State Department press officer, said the United States had not sought any information from other than the Israelis and the Egyptians.

Flight Responsibility

Informed of McDermott's denial, a Foreign Office spokesman in London said: "We stick to what we said before. Otherwise, no comment." The Foreign Office, in saying Britain was responsible for the flights, said "the urgert need for precise information as t othe fact and extent, of Israel incursions into Egypt was clear" to both the United States and Britain.

Franks' visit to Truman brought from the Foreign Office the comment that Franks had been expected to make clear to Mr. Truman that:

1. Britain regards the Jews as the aggressors in the present phase of the Palestine war.

2. The British will regard a Jewish attack on the Red Sea port of Aqaba, or any other part of Trans-Jordan, as an attack on Britain herself. King Abdullah has invoked the British-Trans-Jordan mutual defense treaty and British troops have landed in Aqaba.

3. Britain does not intend to suspend the precautionary measures she has taken in the Middle East. In addition to the Aqaba landing these include the alerting of naval units in eastern Mediterranean bases and the placing of RAF airfields in the Suez Canal zone of Egypt on a preparedness basis.

4. Britain feels that unless the Jews and Arabs get a settlement the Middle East will remain upset with results that can only benefit communism.

In Washington, informants believed Britain was seeking to get the United States to bring pressure on the Jews to come to an agreement with the Arabs.

In Congress, the British moves of the last week brought sharp denunciations from Senators Wayne Morse of Oregon, and Owen Brewster of Maine, and from Representative Jacob K. Javits of New York, all Republicans. Senator Morse denounced the flight of the British planes over the Israel-Arab combat area as a "deliberate provocative act" by the British.

"What were they doing in a place where they had no right to be?" Senator Morse asked. "Every military man knows that reconnaissance is an act of war. It is the first phase of attack."

Senator Brewster asked for an investigation of the British action to determine if British Marshall Plan aid should be cut because of her "military and diplomatic adventures in the Middle East." Javits introduced a resolution asking the Secretary of State for a full report on Britain's actions in the Israeli-Egyptian area.

Jewish Aid Goal Is Again $250 Millions

Atlantic City, N. J., Jan. 13 (AP). The United Jewish Appeal announced today it will seek 250 million dollars in 1949 to finance settlement of destitute European Jews in Israel and the United States.

The sum is the same amount set as a 1948 goal. Last year's campaign brought the UJA about 150 million dollars, an unprecedented collection by an American fund-raising organization.

The goal was set in a resolution approved by 1200 delegates at the closing session of the UJA's tenth annual conference.

[The New York Herald Tribune said Aubrey S. Eban, Israeli representative at the United Nations, outlined the Israeli conditions for peace in the Holy Land

[Eban said Israel desires peace "founded on the full territorial and political integrity of Israel; peace established and maintained in the shelter of the United Nations and its charter; peace assuring to Israel, as to its neighbors, full sovereign equality, national freedom and a place in the community of nations."]

Green

The settlement, named after George Washington, was launched by Rabbi Green in November, 1944, and is now under construction near Yavneh, some 20 miles south of Tel Aviv in Israel.

When completed it will be a settlement for hundreds of orphaned and needy children and will have a school of agriculture.

The Ohev Sholom Congregation will hold a farewell reception for Rabbi and Mrs. Green in the synagogue, 500 I st. nw., Monday at 8 p. m. frontiers reduction, or the removal of Egyptian and Israeli battle units in the Negev and the creation of nonmilitarized zones as ordered in the Security Council resolution of November 4.

Dr. Bunche and his staff greeted the Egyptian delegation of four colonels and two political officials who entered the ballroom first. They were immediately followed by Israel's two delegate heads. Dr. Walter Eytan of the foreign ministry and Col. Mohamed Ibrahim Seif Eddine of the Egyptian general staff shook hands cordially.

Dr. Bunche sat at the head of the table with the Egyptians on his right and Israelis on his left. In a brief opening address he said that success of the conference would in effect mean "liquidation" of the Palestinian conflict on a military level.

He made it clear that the conference would concern itself solely with the armistice and not with a peace settlement, unless both sides felt that the time was appropriate. Then he made an unusual appeal to the governments not involved in the war to "avoid any incidents or acts" which might jeopardize the armistice talks.

Ambassador Koo Says Peace Efforts to Continue

By The Associated Press

China's Ambassador Wellington Koo said yesterday the National government will keep on trying for peace with the Chinese Communists as long as there appears a chance of getting it.

He made the statement after a 30-minute conference with Undersecretary of State Lovett at the State Department.

Asked whether he discussed with Lovett a reported request by China for "mediation" by the United States and other big powers, Koo replied:

"It is not in the nature of mediation that we have asked."

Reds Again Tighten Blockade of Berlin

Bevin, Schuman

London Talks Opened on West Unity

London, Jan. 13 (AP).—The Foreign Ministers of Britain and France attempted to reach a common policy today on combatting communism and promoting western unity.

Britain's Ernest Bevin and France's Robert Schuman met with their key advisers around a conference table piled high with mutual problems. These included: Germany's future, a common defense, Italy's prewar colonies, and their own colonial problems around the world.

Upon their successful solution may depend construction of a western European bloc as a third great world force with strength to speak on equal terms with Russia and the United States.

The conference, which opened today, will continue for two more days behind closed doors.

Not until Friday night—at the earliest—will there be an official communique.

Berlin, Jan. 13 (U.P.).—Russia tightened the Berlin blockade today.

The Soviets assumed direct control over the shipment of virtually all goods from the Russian sector of Berlin to the three western sectors.

The Russians announced that, hereafter, export permits will be issued only by the Soviet military administration. Previously, the permits have been issued by the Soviet-sponsored government in eastern Berlin.

Soviet headquarters said that only "solied linen, newspapers, magazines, exhibition automobiles and gift parcels" will be allowed to leave the Soviet sector without the permits.

Soviet-sector railway police were assigned to aid the regular eastern sector police in checking passengers on subway and elevated stations at the Soviet sector border.

At Frankfurt, the Soviet military government today announced that electricity supplied to Bavaria from behind the iron curtain will be cut off on Saturday, due to lack of rainfall.

Max Reimann, No. 1 Communist of western Germany, will face a British military government court next Tuesday for a provocative speech threatening Germans who work for the allies in the Ruhr with retaliatory measures, it was announced in Dusseldorf today.

Meade Command Probes Death

By The Associated Press

Second Army headquarters at Fort Meade, Md., yesterday said it was investigating the death of Sergt. Clark McVicker of Morgantown, W. Va., 21-year-old clarinet player in the Army Ground Forces Band.

The Army's public relation officer said he presumably died of natural causes, but a board of officers is conducting a post mortem examination to determine the answer.

McVicker shared an apartment in Baltimore with another member of the band. He did not report for duty Wednesday morning. Buddies in the band went to the apartment. They found him unconscious in bed and called a doctor. McVicker died before the physician arrived.

Firemen Revive Boy Overcome by Coal Gas Fumes

A 21-month-old boy, overcome by coal gas last night was revived by the prompt action of Fire Department No. 2 Rescue Squad, which administered oxygen.

Police reported that Robert Francis Kelly, son of Francis P. Kelly, 5040 New Hampshire ave. nw., was playing in the living room of his parents' apartment when he suddenly became sleepy and then unconscious. The rescue squad then was called.

Fire Department officials said coal gas escaping from a faulty furnace through the kitchen and bathroom vents was responsible. Workmen have been repairing the building furnace for the past two or three days, they said.

Gen. Papagos Rejects Greek Top Command

Athens, Jan. 13 (AP).—Gen. Alexander Papagos has rejected the job of generalissimo of Greek armed forces.

He and the government could not agree on the role of the supreme defense council, an authoritative source said today.

Papagos requested he be given complete authority and wanted the 26-man supreme defense council, which includes United States Ambassador Henry F. Grady, cut to speed up its work. He was willing to have Grady included in the smaller council.

The government could not agree to his terms. Friends of the general said the question of his appointment was definitely closed.

An army communique said operations in the Peloponnesus were continuing successfully. It said 43 guerillas were killed and 15 taken prisoner, 30 miles west of Corinth. Guerilla brigades attacked at Naoussa, west of Salonika, the communique said, and fighting went on all night. No casualty figures were given.

French Price-Slashing Plan Is Spurned by Communists

Paris, Jan. 13 (U.P.).—Communist-controlled labor tonight spurned a government price-slashing order and renewed its demands for a 25 per cent wage increase.

The government cracked down on high living costs in a series of decrees which ordered prices of food and other vital items returned to New Year's eve levels.

The move followed a decision by Premier Henri Queuille to reject labor's demands for wage increases. But few believed the government could squeeze back prices after repeated failures of its predecessors for the past four years.

The Communist-controlled General Confederation of Labor (CGT) said price reduction measures "constitute a maladroit and worn-out answer to CGT workers."

A spokesman for the non-Communist Workers Force Movement, which has some two million members, expressed doubt as to the success of the price cuts and said the workers force would continue to demand a better living standard.

Farmers' representatives told Queuille they were being victimized. A spokesman for the retail shopkeepers organization claimed small shop owners also would be ruined.

In the next few days the various ministries will issue decrees setting in detail the new ceiling prices for vegetables, fruit, wine, condensed milk, fish, pork products, leather, shoes and textiles.

Britain Plans New Cuts in American Goods

London, Jan. 13 (AP).—Britain slashed Western Hemisphere purchases a sixth last year and is planning further cuts Chancellor of the Exchequer Sir Stafford Cripps said today.

Cripps gave an optimistic review of the 1948 recovery effort.

"A year ago Britain was on the foothills of achievement," he said. "Now we are well on the slopes of the main range."

He said U. K. imports from the western hemisphere dropped from 50 per cent of total purchases in 1947 to 33 1/3 last year—about the same as 1938.

The reduction was attained by switching purchases to other countries by cutting all imports a fifth below the 1938 level.

A cut in supplies of food and luxury items also cut costs. Before the war food, drink and tobacco accounted for 47 per cent of all imports compared with 42 per cent last year.

U. S. Shipments To Russia Drop Below $50,000

United States shipments to Russia dived below $50,000 in November for the third time in five months, the Census Bureau reported yesterday. In October they had been $500,000.

In contrast Russian shipments to the United States increased to $6,700,000 up to $1,400,000 from October.

The increase in receipts from Russia was due to a $2,400,000 rise in fur shipments, which amounted to $4,600,000 in November.

Manganese, Chrome Off

Russian shipments of manganese and chrome ore, vital metals which the United States is stockpiling for strategic purposes, dropped $1,100,000 to $1,400,000 in November.

Officials said this did not appear of particular significance, although recent reports in trade circles have been that Russian agents have indicated unofficially the Soviet may cut back on shipments of those vital metals.

A cutback might be the Russian answer to the virtual ban the United States has had on shipment of "war potential" and industrial goods to Russia and her satellites since last spring.

Government officials said, however, that November manganese and chrome receipts from Russia topped last February's $1,100,000 and April's $1,300,000, and were not especially small although about $600,000 under the average for the first 10 months of 1948.

The Census Bureau said United States exports in November to all eastern Europe including a number of Russian satellite countries, dropped to $6,300,000 from $11,100,000 in October.

Imports from the area as a whole were off from $10,600,000 in October to $9,900,000 in November despite the rise in imports from Russia alone.

Pope Urges That Priests Aid Refugees

Rome, Jan. 13 (U.P.).—Pope Pius XII urged Catholic clergymen in the United States today to redouble their efforts toward gaining admittance for refugees and called on members of the minor Capuchin Order to keep the masses away from "fallacious ideologies."

The Pope's views were set forth in letters to Msgr. John T. McNicholas, Archbishop of Cincinnati, and the Most Rev. Clement Neubauer of Milwaukee.

At the same time, Msgr. Antonio Santin, Bishop of Trieste, accused the United States of failing to enforce the protection of the Catholic Church and religious freedom in the Yugoslav zone of the Trieste Free Territory.

Santin said the United States should make Yugoslavia halt an "ever-increasing anti-religious campaign."

In the Pope's letter to McNicholas, president of the National Catholic Welfare Conference's central office, the pontiff exhorted American Catholic clergymen to increase their efforts to obtain admission to the United States "for refugees torn from their kin, and also for their families and exiled priests."

To Neubauer, American head of the Capuchin Order, the Pope wrote:

"Penetrate among the masses as mediators of peace, teachers of truth and nurturers of Christian piety" in order to keep the masses away from "fallacious ideologies, tumults and violences."

Once upon a time Dupont Circle was a nice quiet place with cars going one way, streetcars another . . . and pedestrians in the middle clutching their hair trying to decide whether to "Walk" or "Don't Walk."

Acheson Hits At Detractors

point out, as I shall have to point out in a moment, that he was not my assistant, he was never my assistant and, except for the last few months of his service when I was Acting Secretary of State, he never reported to me in any way."

Then Acheson read from a record of the Un-American Activities Committee hearing in which Berle was quoted as having warned Acheson about Alger Hiss in 1941. He said it was clear that Berle's memory went "badly astray" and was "quite wrong."

Acheson's story, told with a wealth of dates and supporting detail, was briefly as follows:

When he became Assistant Secretary early in 1941 he appointed Donald Hiss as his assistant. "A few days or a few weeks later," in February or March, Berle sent for Acheson and told of "information" that one of the Hiss brothers had associations which would be "embarrassing" to Acheson in his new office.

Acheson said it was important to know which brother he had in mind; Berle declined to tell him. Acheson then asked the nature of the "information"; Berle again declined to tell, "for security reasons."

Acheson then saw Donald Hiss, asked him to reflect carefully, and asked whether he had any "associations" that might throw light on Berle's story. Donald Hiss took time to reflect, and said he did not know what the question referred to. He offered to resign as Acheson's assistant if there should be any "embarrassment," but Acheson refused.

Other Assignments

In 1941 (Acheson went on) Donald Hiss worked chiefly on financial controls imposed on Axis and Axis-occupied countries and, for a time, on Soviet Russia.

"I had no dispute with Mr. Berle about anything in the fall or summer or other time in 1944," he said, dealing with the alleged dispute over policy toward Russia. He himself was away at the Bretton Woods conference for most of the summer of that year; he was away at another conference in Montreal until October 8, and Berle left on November 1 to attend the aviation conference at Chicago.

"Therefore," Acheson declared, "whoever had any controversy with Mr. Berle at that time, it was not I."

He was asked whether he would give Assistant Secretary John E. Peurifoy, in charge of State Department administrative matters, the same "free hand" that Secretary Marshall did in weeding out possible subversive employes. Acheson answered with a grin, that Peurifoy had been his own executive assistant and his own choice as Assistant Secretary.

Comments on Disloyalty

"You don't want and haven't wanted any disloyal aides in the State Deppartment?" Connally asked.

"Of course not," was the answer. Acheson added that it would be improper for him or the committee to comment in any way "on the Alger Hiss matter which is now before a United States court"—namely, the indictment for perjury.

Senator Bourke B. Hickenlooper (R., Iowa) asked him whether he had anything to do with the resignation of Joseph Panuch, formerly active in personnel security in the State Department. Acheson briskly replied, without explanation, that he advised Secretary Marshall to accept Panuch's resignation.

Much of yesterday's questioning dealt with the foreign business of Acheson's law firm, especially with its legal work for the Polish government from October, 1945, to March, 1947. Acheson explained that he was not connected with the firm in any way at that time, although it kept his name in its title.

He recalled that Poland had received a 40-million-dollar loan for coal cars and 50 million for surplus property, with State Department approval but over the protests of Arthur Bliss Lane, then Ambassador in Warsaw. The State Department later ordered the surplus property loan suspended.

He told the committee he never had any conversation with any of his former partners on the subject of the Polish loan. In all his 6½ years at the State Department, he said, he had only one call from his firm—because a client who was an exporter wanted to know "whether the State Department would be pleased if he stopped sending materials to Japan."

Million Dollar Fee Denied

For 30 years, Acheson told Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.) his firm had done "considerable" foreign business. For its work on the Polish loan over an 18-month period, he said the firm received not "a million" dollars, as had been reported by a radio commentator, but $50,175.

He reported other foreign business by his firm, and the fees charged, as follows:

For helping the government of Iran in its case before the United Nations Security Council, from 1946 to 1948, $25,000.

For legal help in compensation cases brought by Danish shipowners from July, 1941, to the present, $165,000.

For legal help to the Greek government in its case before the United Nations and in its loan application to the Export-Import Bank, since February 8, 1947, $40,000.

For legal help to Finnish shipowners since December, 1945, $50,000.

For legal help to the Arabian-American Oil Company on tax matters, beginning in December, 1946, $7,500.

Acheson said his firm had also been retained by the Royal Swedish Air Board, regarding the purchase of materials, and by the government of Colombia, regarding defaulted bonds.

Repeating that he had no connection with the firm at any time during his service with the State Department, he said he had confined his legal work in the past 18 months to matters actually before the courts. When he is confirmed as Secretary of State, he said, he will ask the firm to drop his name from its title.

Toward the end of the long examination Vandenberg mentioned "the rather universal debate on our policies toward Russia," and asked whether Acheson could make a general statement of his attitude.

Acheson was careful to keep his reply general, although he said he would gladly be more specific in a closed hearing. He spoke of the "worry and regret" of many people that President Truman was about to lose Secretary Marshall's "powerful help and support."

"No one can take General Marshall's place," he said, "yet someone who has worked under him can do his best with the strength and ability that are given him to follow General Marshall's example."

Reminding the committee that "a man is the product of his past," Acheson said he had re-examined about 100 speeches and statements on foreign policy he had made since 1939, and read a few excerpts for the record.

One was a speech at Yale in November, 1939, urging preparedness against aggression and help to the free countries resisting totalitarian aggression. Another was a speech in New York in June, 1940, warning that irresolution in foreign policy would be fatal for the United States.

Still another was the much-debated speech at Madison Square Garden in November, 1945, under the auspices of the Council for Soviet-American Friendship, in which he criticized Soviet attacks on the liberties of neighboring peoples. This speech, he said, was written in the State Department, approved by Secretary Byrnes and delivered on department orders.

Finally, he read his statement of February 10, 1947, that Soviet foreign policy was "an aggressive and expanding one"—a remark that brought a formal protest from Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov.

Answering Senator Alexander (R., Wis.), Acheson said that as an individual he favored a constitutional change whereby treaties would be ratified by a majority vote of both Houses of Congress.

The only other witness yesterday was former Secretary of State Edward R. Stettinius, who flashed his well-remembered smile on the committee and read a brief prepared statement praising Acheson.

Stettinius called him a man "of unusual intellectual brilliance, of great personal integrity, forceful and courageous in meeting problems."

"Only frivolity or irresponsibility on the part of any member of the public," he said, "could suggest that Mr. Acheson was ever actuated by anything except a desire to further the honor and safety of his country."

Thereafter the committee went into brief executive session, and decided to hear Acheson behind closed doors this morning before voting on his confirmation.

Preparedness Urged For Atomic Attacks

Chicago, Jan. 13 (U.P.).—Three atomic physicians warned tonight that the Nation's major cities are unprepared to cope with an atom bomb attack, which would kill one third of their population outright.

"Medically the United States is hardly better off with an atomic bomb attack on one of its major cities than the Japanese were at Nagasaki," they said.

They urged organization and mobilization steps in all large cities so that doctors may save at least another third of the population.

The physicians, Drs. Leon O. Jacobson, J. Garrot Allen and Robert S. Stone, all formerly connected with the Manhattan project, wrote in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

"One third of the population of a bombed city will be killed outright or will die in days to weeks no matter how soon they are brought to medical attention," they said, "but another third of the population would survive providing medical care is quickly and adequately provided for."

They said the remaining third would have a "fair chance" of surviving without medical aid unless epidemics break out or transportation or other basic needs are disrupted.

The physicians suggested a three-step mobilization plan:

1. Construction of facilities on the outskirts of all large cities to provide hospital care, examination of ambulatory casualties and emergency rations for large numbers of people.

2 A plan for well-trained and strategically placed workers to police and evacuate casualties.

3. Provisions for competent persons to determine the center of the bombed area and decide where evacuation is worthwhile.

The physicians said that in an emergency doctors will have to take orders from scientists who will determine where the danger areas are.

They envisioned a three-zone setup in a city, the first of which would be the center of the bombed area where evacuation or treatment "would seem useless."

A second zone farther out from the first would contain inhabitants who would need immediate medical attention. The third zone, still farther away from the blast, would not require immediate attention.

The doctors warned, however, that any mobilization plans must consider the possibility that an enemy may loose a flood of radioactive isotopes on a city. They said whole cities could thus be made contaminated and uninhabitable.

AEC Stands Pat on Graham

Dr. Graham had been cleared over the objections of the board headed by Roberts, the President said he thought the reporter was wrong about the objections of the Roberts group.

An AEC official told The Washington Post that "the commission reported only the action that was finally taken—the action that it is responsible for."

When asked if refusal to deny that it had overruled its security officials indicated that the charges were correct, he replied:

"You'll have to make your own interpretation."

A flat refusal to discuss the case was registered by Roberts at his home near Chester Springs, Pa.

"We rendered our report to the commission," Roberts declared. "It is up to the commission. They can do whatever they see fit." Roberts added that "it would be the height of impropriety" for him to reveal what was in the advisory committee's report.

When asked if he would deny the radio statement, he responded: "No, certainly not."

Lewis' charges also included one that Chairman David Lilienthal of the AEC favored Graham's clearance because Lilienthal previously had let Graham in on atomic secrets, and felt that a refusal to certify him would be embarrassing.

In its report a month ago, the commission said clearance was necessary if Graham was to continue as president of the Oak Ridge Institute of Nuclear Studies. The clearance was granted, the commission stated, despite what it called his "association at times with individuals or organizations influenced by motives or views of Communist derivation." It added:

"It is clear in Dr. Graham's case that such associations have neither impaired his integrity and independence, nor aroused in him the slightest sympathy of communism or other anti-democratic or subversive doctrines."

Foe of Marx, Says Graham

Chapel Hill, N. C., Jan. 13 (AP).—Dr. Frank P. Graham, who has been permitted by the Atomic Energy Commission to see certain secret documents, asserted tonight he has "always been against communism and totalitarian dictatorships."

Dr. Graham, president of the University of North Carolina and head of the Oak Ridge Institute of Nuclear Studies, made his assertion in a telegram to Fulton Lewis, Jr., a radio commentator.

Lewis said in a broadcast last night the AEC had cleared Dr. Graham over the protests of its five-man security board

Speaking of broadcaster Lewis' statement, Dr. Graham declared: "I know nothing of any action except the decision of the Atomic Energy Commission. I have always been opposed to communism and all totalitarian dictatorships."

Last December 20 the AEC said it had given Dr. Graham the right to see certain secret documents despite what it called his association "at times with individuals or organizations influenced by motives or views of Communist derivation.

"It is clear in Dr. Graham's case that such associations have neither impaired his integrity and independence, nor aroused in him the slightest sympathy for comn.unism or other antidemocratic or subversive doctrines."

The Oak Ridge Institute of Nuclear Study is a nonprofit group that includes representatives of a number of Southern universities which was formed to promote regional participation in atomic studies at Oak Ridge, Tenn., location of an atomic energy plant.

Explosive Heart Of A-Bomb Is Put At 20-30 Pounds

Meadville, Pa., Jan. 13 (AP).—The explosive heart of an atom-bomb weighs 20 to 30 pounds, and is about the size of a softball, says Prof. J. A. Campbell of Oberlin College.

He made the estimate in a speech tonight to the Erie section of the American Chemical Society.

"In spite of all the supposed secrecy about the bomb, it is easy to show that the explosive charge weighs in the neighborhood of 20 to 30 pounds and occupies a sphere of 3 or 4 inches in diameter—about the size of an indoor baseball," Prof. Campbell said.

There's enough uranium and thorium to make 10,000 atom bombs, he added.

Army Ends 2-Year Enlistments Today

Truman Asserts

48-Group Air Force Adequate

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

President Truman declared yesterday that the 48-group strength established for the Air Force under the 1950 budget is adequate.

He also said that the Air Force and all sections of the Defense Department will support his budget.

These comments were made at a White House press conference late yesterday, as indications grew that the air power issue is headed for a full-dress congressional row.

Many members of Congress believe in a 70-group Air Force, kept modern by much larger plane procurement funds than allowed in the '50 budget. Representative Carl Vinson (D., Ga.) has announced plans to call chiefs of all the armed forces before the House Armed Services Committee for testimony on whether the strengths allowed under the budget are adequate. Vinson will be chairman of the group.

Representative Carl Hinshaw (R., Calif.) also attacked the cutback to 48 groups yesterday. He took the House floor to denounce the move as a "crying shame."

But Mr. Truman's comments yesterday indicated that Air Force Secretary W. Stuart Symington and USAF generals will take a much less prominent role in any congressional fight for 70 groups than they did during the Republican-controlled Eightieth Congress.

Then, Symington and other officials spoke up strongly—under questioning—for higher Air Force appropriations than the President wanted.

Yesterday, Mr. Truman was asked if he had issued any instructions to the Air Force as to discussion of the 70-group program before Congress.

The President answered that the budget as it went to Congress is to be supported by all sections of the Defense Department.

This was taken to mean either that Symington has pledged his support or that Mr. Truman as Commander-in-Chief of the Army, Navy and Air Force was issuing an order to back up the budget.

A reporter also asked the Chief Executive if his proposal for a 48-group Air Force indicated an improvement in the international situation. The President said he didn't want to answer in the way it was asked. He added that he considered the proposed size of the Air Force to be adequate.

The Army will discontinue two-year enlistments after today, it was revealed last night.

Officials said the main aim is to get more actual service out of recruits. After deducting time spent in basic training and en route to and from overseas station, the net time a two-year volunteer serves is very limited.

An Army spokesman said the order requiring most recruits to sign up for at least three years probably will slow down the number of volunteers slightly, though not many men have been applying for 24 month hitches.

Now 35,000 Monthly

At present, the number of volunteers is running about 35,000 monthly, more than is necessary to maintain the Army at its cutback 677,000-man ceiling. Later, steps may be necessary to force down the number of volunteers, by raising entrance standards or cutting out inducements, it was said.

Remembering the lean years of 1946 and 1947 when the Army could not maintain an even lower strength than now authorized, however, officials are not worrying about too many recruits. Any abandonment of the draft would bring back that situation, they declared.

Officials said a three-year enlistment will be the minimum for recruits, except men of draft age who volunteer for a 21-month term or 18-year olders who apply for a year's hitch.

Earlier in the day, National Selective Service Headquarters instructed State offices and boards to stop sending draftees to the Army for physical examination prior to classification.

Draft Calls Canceled

The order will remain in effect until further notice, it was said, probably until the Army resumes new draft calls. Over the weekend, it was announced that the February call was canceled and that there will be no call in March.

When and if draft calls are resumed depends upon whether the number of volunteers continues to run high enough to maintain the new 677,000 ceiling.

Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, Selective Service director, wired State directors to stop classifying registrants 1-A and 1-AO, and no longer send them to the Army for examination. The order permits boards to continue to classify men eligible for deferred classes, but not those eligible for induction.

Bowman Urges Study of Sea, Potential World Food Source

Dr. Isaiah Bowman, internationally known geographer, yesterday urged a closer study of the sea, not only for transportation, military advantages and weather forecasting but for a new source of food.

Much, he said, is known of the nutrient value of the minute forms of sea life, but "only little study" has been made toward their potential use as a world food supply.

This untapped food source, he said, comprise the lower forms of sea life, vegetable and animal, and mostly invisible to the naked eye. They are called "plankton," and consist of sea algaes, the vegetative form, and protozoans, the free-floating or weak-swimming animal life of the oceans.

Science, said Dr. Bowman, should study the subject on "an extensive scale" to determine "to just what extent such organisms can be relied upon to help feed the world." It may be, he said, that they will prove valuable as a direct food, or, more possibly, as an indirect source as a food for livestock.

Dr. Bowman was principal speaker at yesterday morning's session of the fifteenth annual meeting of the American Society of Photogrammetry. He recently retired as president of Johns Hopkins University.

Urging "a new map of the sea," he said scientists should further study ice movements in the Arctic and Antarctic to learn their effects on world weather conditions, and chart their movements for a better knowledge of their free channels in event of war.

Commenting on weather studies in relation to polar areas, he declared:

Once the probability of good and bad years (of weather) is better known, better protective measures will come, along with a better prepared livestock economy, a better economy in general.

At an afternoon session of the map-plotters and allied interests, at Hotel Shoreham, Col. George W. Goddard, United States Air Force, urged continued support of photographic research. He is chief of the engineering division, Air Materiel Command, and as such heads the Air Force's photographic program.

World War II, said Colonel Goddard, caught United States "looking through rose-colored glasses instead of precision lenses." And only "time" enabled this country to catch up to the optic demands of the war.

Declaring that "time" may never again "be on our side," he said:

"Only by continued research can we hope to photograph the things to come."

Of present research needs, he said these include the problems of putting television and photography together to work for aerial reconnaissance, and those of camera-equipped aircraft for flights at supersonic speeds.

Georgia Slaying Acquittal Called Judicial Tragedy

Cleveland, Jan. 13 (U.P.).—Joseph M. Goldwasser, Cleveland businessman who sought to aid the widow of a slain Georgia Negro, said today the trial and acquittal of one of the alleged slayers was "the greatest tragedy in American judicial history."

Goldwasser returned here today following the trial at Lyons, Ga.

Goldwasser was barred from the trial when the defense subpenaed him as a witness.

Goldwasser said threats against his life were hurled at him as he and Mrs. Amy Mallard, the widow, arrived at Lyons from Savannah in a Georgia State Police car.

Pilots Charge 'Slave' Deal to Air Force

By C. B. Allen

Members of the Air Line Pilots Association charged yesterday that the Air Force has connived with the scheduled air lines to make them virtual "slaves" without freedom of economic or patriotic action.

The charge, forwarded for action to the A.L.P.A.'s national headquarters in Chicago by its Washington office, was based on a new "policy letter" sent by Air Force headquarters to all air line pilots seeking extended active duty as Reserve officers. In substance, the letter says that such officers—even though they have been furloughed by their companies and have no means of support—will be ordered to military duty only on certification from their employers that the air lines won't need them for the next three years.

Air Force spokesmen said that the "peonage letter" complained of by the air line pilots has been followed by another communication, now in the mails, which makes it "an academic issue." The new letter, they said, informs pilot applicants for active duty in the Berlin airlift (the job for which air lines pilots particularly were wanted) that the Air Force now has all the crews it requires for this operation.

When the Air Force first started recruiting airline pilots for the airlift, it worked out a mutually satisfactory deal with the ALPA and the Air Transport Association whereby Reserve officer ALPA members, on furlough because of the winter slump in air travel, would be called to active duty and released in the spring when jobs opened up for them again. It was felt that this would work to the benefit of all concerned, since the Air Force badly needed the most skilled pilots it could get for the Berlin run during the winter months.

The ALPA's contracts with the air lines protects the pilots' seniority rights during a maximum furlough of only two years.

In Security Council

Indonesian Peace Plan Under Study

Lake Success, Jan. 13 (AP).—A three-point program for settling the Indonesian conflict was reported under study today by several Security Council delegations.

Informed sources said the delegations were working on a resolution containing these major points:

1. Immediate freedom for Indonesian Republican leaders held by the Dutch.
2. A free election under United Nations supervision.
3. Withdrawal of Dutch troops to previous lines held before the Netherlands began military action last month.

These sources said they expected a resolution would be ready for the Security Council when it takes up the Indonesian case again Friday at 3 p. m. (EST).

A spokesman for the Netherlands delegation reiterated his country's opposition to any demand that Dutch troops retire from Indonesian Republican territory. He said the Netherlands never would carry out such an order from the Council.

Indonesian Leader, Premier Drees Confer

Batavia, Jan. 13 (U.P.).—Dutch Premier Willem Drees and Indonesian leader Professor Supomo conferred for an hour yesterday.

A Dutch spokesman described the discussions as "reconnaissance." The meeting was understood to have been on Dutch initiative.

Indonesian sources said Supomo would not meet Drees again. It was believed Supomo had turned down an offer to join a Dutch-sponsored interim government.

Order Sparing Hirohito Came From 'the Top'

By Frank L. White

Tokyo, Jan. 13 (AP).—Documentary evidence available in Tokyo today showed that Emperor Hirohito escaped prosecution as a war criminal because of an order transmitted to General MacArthur through the United States Joint Chiefs of Staff.

The order, in January, 1946, was part of the directive to the occupation commander to set up the international military tribunal which subsequently convicted 25 Japanese. Seven, including former Premier Hideki Tojo, were hanged December 23.

Reliable sources said General MacArthur was not consulted prior to issuance of the order, which specifically prohibited prosecution of the Emperor.

The same sources said the decision came from "a Government level" and that the joint chiefs were merely transmitting agents.

(Washington records show the joint chiefs in January, 1946, were Admirals William D. Leahy and Chester Nimitz and Gens. Dwight D. Eisenhower and H. H. Arnold. General Eisenhower and Admiral Nimitz declined comment yesterday, and General Arnold said, "It was never discussed when I was a member.")

McManus Heads City Division in Red Cross Drive

William J. McManus, vice president in charge of public relations for the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., yesterday was appointed chairman of the city division of the 1949 American Red Cross Fund Drive in the District. A goal of $924,000 has been set for Washington.

Volunteer solicitors of the city division will collect contributions from the smaller business concerns in the downtown area, under direction of McManus.

In the national campaign to raise 60 million dollars, Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg, wife of the Senator from Michigan, has been appointed along with 10 other prominent Americans to serve as campaign vice chairman, it was announced.

Three-Day Bridge Tourney Starts Today in Virginia

A three-day Northern Virginia championship bridge tournament will begin at 2:15 p. m. today in the George Mason Hotel at Alexandria.

The play will continue through Saturday and Sunday, with two sessions daily. The tournament is sponsored by the Washington Bridge League.

Defending champions in the two events to be played today are Mrs. S. L. Chapis and Mrs. H. E. Whitaker of Baltimore. This is the afternoon game for women and Mrs. W. M. McIntyre and Leroy Thurtell, both of Washington, hold the mixed pairs leadership.

Col. Russell J. Baldwin, star director of the American contract bridge tournament, will conduct the evening round beginning at 8:15 p. m.

Lana Turner Has Miscarriage

New York, Jan. 13 (AP).—Screen Actress Lana Turner had a miscarriage tonight at Doctors' Hospital, the hospital announced.

Miss Turner, wife of millionaire Henry J. (Bob) Topping, had been expecting a baby in April.

The hospital said Miss Turner's condition was "very good." The miscarriage occurred at 6:45 p. m. (EST).

She was admitted last night, a spokesman said, for "routine checks" and to undergo RH factor blood tests.

He said there was no indication that she would have a miscarriage.

Miss Turner was married to Topping last April.

The hospital said "foetal death occurred about six weeks ago."

GI Sentenced to Hang For Rape-Murder

Munich, Jan. 13 (U.P.).—A court-martial today sentenced an American soldier to hang for raping and murdering a German school teacher and sentenced a second soldier to 20 years in prison for his part in the crime.

Recruit Joseph D. Bright, Beech Bluff, Tenn., was found guilty on two counts of rape and one of murder.

Thomas, Jr., to Talk

Lowell Thomas, jr., son of the commentator, will give an illustrated lecture on "Where Turkey Faces Russia" tonight at 8:15 o'clock in Constitution Hall, 18th and D sts. nw. His talk will be seventh in the current winter series sponsored by the National Geographic Society.

Lawyer Is Fined $100 For Contempt

Lawyer Edward Bennett Williams was fined $100 for contempt of court by Judge Matthew F. McGuire in Municipal Court yesterday.

Williams was representing Mrs. Ruth Mae Hall, who was found guilty of assault with a dangerous weapon in connection with the shooting of Mrs. Ruth Mae Spears.

Judge McGuire said Williams was in contempt of court when he refused to obey the court's order to produce a witness.

Truman Sidesteps Labor Law Dispute

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

President Truman wants no part of the current controversy revolving around the proposed methods for legislating a "fair deal" management-labor relations code.

Mr. Truman said yesterday he preferred to let Congress decide the issue without any interference from the White House, just as he didn't like to have the legislative branch of the Government interfere with his functions as Chief Executive.

The comment of the President came in answer to a question asked of him during his press conference:

"With respect to doing something about the Taft-Hartley law, would you care to say whether you are a 'one-package' man or a 'two-package' man?"

Labor Wants Two Steps

A "one-package" man is an advocate of wrapping up in a single omnibus measure repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act, restoration of the Wagner Act, and amendment of the latter law in accordance with the President's wishes. These amendments would ban jurisdictional strikes, unjustifiable secondary boycotts, and would set up machinery for dealing with strikes affecting the national health and safety.

A "two-package" man is a proponent of a plan to attain the same end in two legislative steps. The first calls for immediate repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act and revival of the Wagner Act. The second step would provide for the President's amendments.

Labor leaders are pushing for the "two-package" approach. They feel that the hearings and debate involved in the "one-package" plan will indefinitely delay elimination of the Taft-Hartley Act, which they regard as a "slave-labor" law. Furthermore, the leadership of the AFL and CIO frankly want the restrictions of the Taft-Hartley Act out of the way before the fourth postwar round of wage negotiations gets under way about May.

On the other hand, several administration leaders on Capitol Hill have come out for the "single package" approach, apparently on the grounds of practical politics.

Sums Up Thinking

Senator Elbert D. Thomas (D., Utah), chairman of the Senate Labor Committee, rather succinctly summed up the thinking of the pro-labor 'single-package' adherents after an organization meeting of his committee yesterday.

"We must remember we have to proceed with the rules," explained the ruddy faced Westerner. "There is no way to cut off debate. Nobody mentioned the word 'package' in our discussion today, but I can't see how we can have anything but one package no matter how you do it."

Thomas' own bill would simply kill the Taft-Hartley Act, revive the Wagner Act. Nonetheless, he indicated, there's no way to prevent amendments being suggested, and perhaps added to his bill, which would finally wind up as a "single-package" law.

Representative Lesinski (D., Mich.), chairman-designate of the House Labor Committee, yesterday introduced a "two-package" bill—calling for repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act and revival of the Wagner Act—similar to the Thomas bill in the Senate.

But Lesinski, an advocate of a "one-package" bill, said he will also introduce another bill to show his "real convictions." He dropped the "two-package" bill in the hopper yesterday, he said, in order to show his willingness to permit speedy action on the overall legislation by his committee.

Anyhow, Senator Thomas commented, the whole idea of "one-package" or "two-package" approaches is merely an invention of the press. Top AFL and CIO officials have also stated that the question of one or two steps in revising the national labor laws was a "teapot tempest," and not at all a major issue.

Press for Speedy Action

Nevertheless, there's no doubt but that the labor leaders are upset and are pressing for speedy action on Capitol Hill.

An AFL legislative delegation called on congressional labor committee chairmen Wednesday. Some 45 delegates of the United Electrical Workers (CIO), carrying a petition with 250,000 signatures, paid a call on Capitol Hill yesterday. The petition called for immediate repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act.

Meanwhile, Senator Rober Taft (R., Ohio), coauthor of the labor-management law, predicted that all major sections of the law will survive the Administration's drive to repeal the measure.

The National Catholic Welfare Conference declared yesterday that any new labor law should provide for Government cooperation in bringing about "more peaceful labor-management partnerships."

Corning Television Bulb Plant In Pa. Lays Off 250 Workers

Charleroi, Pa., Jan. 13 (AP).—About 250 employes at the Corning glass works here have been laid off, the firm said today, because of a slack demand for 12½-inch bulbs used in making television tubes.

Production of the bulbs, a Corning spokesman said, is not expected to be resumed until early summer when new tube plants to use the bulbs, now being built by Corning customers, enter production.

Kaiser-Frazer Cuts Output 'Temporarily'

Detroit, Jan. 13 (AP).—Kaiser-Frazer Corp. today ordered a production cut at which it had hinted earlier in a complaint against credit restrictions.

The automobile company announced a "temporary reduction," effective next week, and said its action was caused by the Government's anti-inflation limitations on installment buying.

Earlier this week, Kaiser-Frazer said the restrictions were cutting into its car sales and threatening a "spiral of unemployment" in the auto industry.

On the surface, at least, K.-F. was alone with this point of view in the industry.

At the time of K.-F.'s original complaint, most other car manufacturers said they had experienced no substantial patro age loss.

The extent of Kaiser-Frazer's reduction was not made clear in today's statement.

However, K.-F. previously said it might reduce daily output from 675 cars to around 400 units. This would mean a layoff of about 3500 workers or shorter hours for its full force of 15,000.

K.-F.'s announcement quoted Edgar F. Kaiser, vice president and general manager, in criticism of the Federal Reserve Board's credit restrictions.

The restrictions, Kaiser said, "arbitrarily bar the purchase of a medium-priced car by approximately 86 per cent of the American public."

About four months ago, the Federal Reserve Board revived its wartime regulation "W," which limited time payments. A car buyer now must complete an installment purchase within 15 to 18 months. Previously he had 24 to 30 months.

Camp Operator Robbed of $95 By Armed Couple

Fairfax County police yesterday broadcast a lookout for an armed couple who robbed a tourist camp owner of $95 about 12:15 a. m. yesterday.

Jack Sweeney, owner of Sweeney's Tourist Camp at Fairfax Circle, told police he was closing his restaurant when the couple came in and ordered cokes. The man, he said, drew a revolver and demanded his money. The girl, who also had a gun, took the money from the wallet Sweeney placed on the counter. He said they drove off in an old car.

Sweeney described the man as being between 25 and 30, 6 feet tall, 150 pounds and wearing a green Army jacket. He said the girl was about 19, 5 feet tall, 100 pounds and wore a dark blue coat.

Teen-Age Club Dedication Set

Dedication ceremonies officially opening the Arlington Teen-Age Club at Glebe rd. and Fairfax dr. will be held Saturday at 2 p. m.

After the exercises, which will include a concert by a 21-piece band and addresses by Sheriff Elwood Clements and County Board Member Daniel Dugan, the teenagers will hold a dance.

Dances for youths will be held free of charge at the clubhouse from 8 to 11 p. m. today and January 21 and 28.

Child Badly Hurt When Hit by Car In Front of Home

A 6-year-old child was seriously injured about 3:40 p. m. yesterday when struck by an automobile in front of her home.

The child, Mary J. Miller, of 5110 13th st. nw., ran from between parked cars into the front fender of an automobile driven by Sergt. Ralph O. Hough, 31, of Walter Reed Hospital, police reported.

She was admitted to the Children's Hospital in undetermined condition with possible skull fracture, possible fracture of the left side of her face and possible concussion.

Mary Spargo Wins Divorce in Reno

Mrs. Mary Spargo Pryor, a reporter for The Washington Post, was granted a divorce yesterday in Reno, Nev., from William Sherman Pryor, employe of the Washington Times Herald and president of the Washington Newspaper Guild, according to the Associated Press. She charged extreme mental cruelty.

Mrs. Pryor was allowed to resume her maiden name. The couple was married in April, 1942. Her complaint said property rights had been settled in a sealed agreement. There were no children and no community property.

Tamm and Fennell Nominations Sent

President Truman yesterday sent to the Senate the nominations of Judge Edward A. Tamm of District Court and Judge Aubrey B. Fennell of Municipal Court.

The nomination of Judge Fennell was for another term. His prior term in Municipal Court expired last July 7.

This is the third time Judge Tamm's name has gone to the Senate. He is at present serving under a recess appointment.

President Truman gave Judge Tamm a recess appointment last June 22, two days after the Eightieth Congress had adjourned. The Senate had twice failed to act on nominations of Judge Tamm.

The recess appointment was good only until the beginning of the Eighty-first Congress.

Judge Tamm is a former aide to FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover and he was recommended for the bench by Attorney General Tom C. Clark. The District Bar Association bitterly opposed his nomination.

At hearings on Judge Tamm's nomination before the Senate Judiciary Committee, his opponents charged he was not qualified to sit on the bench.

Vital to Congress

Youthful Ideas Urged By Kefauver

The electoral college system is typical of the congressional philosophy, "it was good enough for my father, so it's good enough for me," and it must be changed, Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.) told the Junior Board of Commerce yesterday.

"Age brings a resistance to change," the youthful Senator said, declaring antiquated methods are maintained simply because they are old and traditional.

Kefauver addressed the Junior Board luncheon at the Burlington Hotel. He told the members that youthful and useful thinking by the Eighty-first Congress is essential to cope with new problems. He said Americans should be more concerned with perfecting a means to stop World War III before it starts than preventing another depression.

"Here youth should exert itself by all means," he said, "for it is the young man who must do the fighting, the bleeding and the dying, if we fail once again to win the peace."

In this modern day, "a cobweb can hardly deflect a guided missile," he added. "The vigor and eagerness of the youthful members of Congress is urgently needed."

Oil Seepage Source Being Tracked Down

Attempts to trace the source of fuel oil seepage on the Anacostia riverfront are planned with utilization of special tests by District health authorities, it was disclosed yesterday.

Meanwhile, a barge captain, Charles A. Simpson, 30, 138 12th st. ne., has forfeited $100 after he was charged with permitting part of the fuel oil cargo being unloaded at the 13th st. se. docks to flow into the river.

However, prime source of the seepage into the river causing fouled boat bottoms and irreparable damage to fish life is from oil pipes in the neighborhood, it was said in Municipal Court. So far, efforts to localize the trouble has proven fruitless.

The L. P. Steuart Co., Washington Gas Light Co., and the Petrol Corp. all have pipes traversing the area of the seepage, but each company denies its lines are leaking.

Hydrostatic tests will be used by the health officers. Compressed air will be pumped into sealed-off sections of the pipes to determine where the leaks are.

Higher Income Taxes Sought

man had brains enough and knew enough about the tax laws of the country to make more than $25,000 a year, he was probably entitled to make it.

A furious controversy broke out when President Roosevelt, in 1942, asked Congress to put a $25,000 salary limit on net salaries. Mr Roosevelt said that in time of grave national danger, when all excess income should go to win the war," no American citizen ought to have a net income, after he has paid his taxes, of more than $25,000."

Congress, in writing the anti-inflation bill, deliberately left out the $25,000 salary limit. It did, however, write in a provision which authorized the President, in stabilizing wages and salaries, "to correct gross inequalities."

Taking advantage of this provision, President Roosevelt issued an executive order providing that no salary should exceed $25,000 net.

Congress, angry over Mr. Roosevelt's action, later nullified his action by tackling a rider onto a bill raising the national debt limit. The President declined to approve the rider but allowed it to become law without his signature because he couldn't very well veto the raising of the debt limit.

George Attacked Proposal

Senator George (D., Ga.), then as now chairman of the Finance Committee, said of Mr. Roosevelt's $25,000 salary ceiling that it accomplished "no purpose save the fanciful one of equality of earnings, and equality of earnings has its base in no economy except the communistic state."

Asked yesterday about Mr. Truman's statement about applying the new tax increase to incomes starting at $6000, Senator George said:

"The President is quite right. If he intends to get four billion dollars, he has to get about half of it from corporations and the other half from individuals.

"In order to get half from individuals, you would have to go down to $6000 or below it."

Senator George made it clear that he was not expressing any opinion as to whether the Government should raise four billion dollars.

Senator Taft (R., Ohio), chairman of the GOP policy committee, had this comment:

"I don't believe there should be any increase in taxes. I believe we should cut expenditures instead of raising taxes."

Representative Robert L. Doughton (D., N. C.), chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, declined to comment specifically on the proposed $6000 tax floor. He said, however, that he hoped Congress won't have to raise taxes as much as the President has suggested.

Rain Succeeds Snow on Coast

(From Press Dispatches)

Los Angeles, Jan. 13.—Heavy showers—rain this time—fell over southern California valleys and the coast today, but it snowed in the mountains for the fifth consecutive day.

The white flakes added to the snowpack at Palmdale and Daggett on the Mojave Desert during the night. Mount Wilson, near Pasadena, was snowed in and reported a blizzard with 60-mile-an-hour winds.

Winds 40 to 50 miles an hour buffeted the coastline between Oceanside and San Diego. But southern California's white winter holiday was about over as the rain dissolved the snow.

Elsewhere in the West, clear skies signified an end to the record two weeks of bad weather.

Forecasters said no new storms were on the immediate horizon.

Supt. Clyde Powers said the situation was "more promising" at the Pine Ridge, S. Dak., reservation where 9000 Indians were in distress from lack of food and fuel.

School Ruled In Contempt

the petitions provided for such bond issue."

"They have not followed a more direct and expeditious method for raising funds provided by the Virginia statute." (This statement was not amplified.)

The judge further said in the opinion:

"The school board has taken no formal action concerning the site of any colored school building, although the superintendent expressed his views it should be on the site of the training school.

"It was not until after the entry of an order to show cause (why the board should not be found in contempt) that a substantial portion of the equipment now being used was provided for the training school (the Negro school)."

Separate Buildings Set Up

"The defendants charge that the purpose of the plantiffs is to eliminate segregation of the races and then offer to inject into the case at this time an issue as to whether the colored buildings are adequate."

"The fact remains that the defendants have provided separate buildings, one group of which is decidedly superior to the other.

"Having adopted a policy of segregated schools, those entrusted with the responsibility of providing education must see to it that such provision is without discrimination."

The judge said the board had been enjoined from discrimination in the matter of courses taught and school facilities provided. He said the board and the superintendent had fulfilled the order on the first point and had failed on the second.

Charles E. Ford, an attorney for the board, said he did not know whether an appeal was open to the defendants. He said, however, that they would appeal if it proved possible.

Oliver W. Hill, one of the attorneys for the Negro school children, called the decision "a very able opinion."

Negroes Refused Fall Registration

The contempt issue came to a head in King George and Gloucester counties in September when 10 Negro children were refused permission to register for white high schools.

Attorneys for Negro groups immediately filed contempt proceedings against the school boards, charging that Judge Hutcheson's April equalization order was being ignored.

Attorneys for the school boards countercharged that admission of Negroes to white schools would violate Virginia's segregation law.

In November, however, voters of King George County approved a $150,000 bond issue to build a new Negro high school in a special referendum following Judge Hutcheson's order. Two days after the referendum the King George school board voted to buy a plot of land containing 4½ acres on which to build the school.

As a result of these actions, Negro attorneys agreed to hold in abeyance their efforts to have the King George County school board held in contempt of court.

NLRB Orders Employe Vote on Sunpapers

By The Associated Press

The National Labor Relations Board yesterday ordered a collective bargaining election among news and editorial employes of the Baltimore Sunpapers to determine whether they want to be represented by the American Newspaper Guild.

The election was petitioned by the guild. The main point in dispute was whether certain employes were supervisors and should be excluded from voting and coverage in the proposed bargaining unit.

The NLRB found that these were bona fide supervisors and should be excluded: Assistant city editors, telegraph editors, chiefs of copy desks, assistant sports editors, staff correspondents assigned to Washington, confidential secretaries to the supervising editors.

To be included in the bargain unit, over the protest of the Sunpaper: Editorial writers, copy boys and girls, racing editor, makeup and assistant makeup editors, field correspondents, Washington correspondents regularly working out of Baltimore, dramatic critics, cartoonists, assistant chiefs of the photographic and art departments, chief photographer of the Sunday magazine, assistant editors of the Sunday feature section and the Sunday magazine, secretaries to the editors of the Sunday feature section and the Sunday magazine, the night librarian, financial editors, and the chief of the financial tabulation department.

The NLRB also found that telephone operators have no community of interest with news and editorial employes, being a part of the business force, and therefore excluded them from the unit.

The election is to be held by February 11.

Gen. Carl Spaatz, former chief of staff of the Air Force, was named for appointment as general, United States Air Force, with rank from February 11, 1945, under provisions of Public Law 791, Eightieth Congress.

Admiral Raymond A. Spruance was listed for permanent appointment in the grade of permanent admiral in the Navy, as authorized by the same law.

An Administration spokesman said recently that the Democratic Senate will confirm at least 800 Federal appointments which the Eightieth Congress held up.

The Republicans delayed all the confirmations in the belief they would be running the White House after the November 2 election and that the jobs should go to members of their party.

Boyd poses a special problem. He and his family of four children have had to live on savings since his pay stopped. The Administration spokesman said Congress not only would confirm his nomination but pass a special bill to pay him the $10,000 due him.

The Administration also is counting on the Democratic Congress to save the job of Reclamation Commissioner Mike Strauss. The Republicans tacked a rider on an appropriations bill requiring that the reclamation commissioner be an engineer with five years' experience. Strauss was unable to qualify.

The new list of nominations included one major judicial promotion, that of Federal District Judge F. Ryan Duffy of Wisconsin to be circuit judge of the United States Court of Appeals for the Seventh District.

Indians Said to Lack Medical Care

Low man on the Government totem pole, at least as far as medical service is concerned, is the American Indian.

The fact was attested here yesterday by Dr. Fred T. Foard, health director of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, in apology for the almost negligible budget increase for medical care of reservation Indians.

The budget estimate, totaling $7,731,000, was contained in the President's voluminous report to Congress, on Monday. It might have gone unnoted, save for recent statistics on the health plight of living, ailing and dying descendants of the once-proud owners of America.

Disclaiming responsibility, Dr. Foard disclosed that his own efforts to help the disease-ridden wards of the Government were virtually stymied by the Budget Office and its directions to keep down budget requests.

Asked for $9,163,814

Despite such directions, the health director said, he went ahead and submitted a "minimum needs" budget of $9,163,814. The difference between that request and the request forwarded to Congress, approximately 1½ million dollars, was disallowed by the Federal budget makers, Dr. Foard said.

The extra sum, he explained, was already asked to set up systematized procedures of preventive medicine among the Indians. The proposed system, he said, would "at least would be a start" toward restoring health and cutting into "the appalling death rate" of the tribes.

In two recent reports of medical survey teams from the American Medical Association who toured Indian hospitals and health facilities the Bureau of Indian Affairs was sharply criticized for its inadequate medical service. A third report, from the AMA team that visited Indian reservations in Southwest United States, has been withheld.

Inquiry yesterday to the office of William E. Warne, Assistant Secretary of the Interior Department, brought the response that the Southwest team report had been returned to the survey group for "necessary revisions." Unofficially, however, bureau heads who saw the report as first submitted termed it "too hot to handle."

Story of Neglect

Even a casual study of statistics already in files of the Interior Department's Bureau of Indian Affairs tells a graphic story of neglect of medical care to reservation Indians. They show, for example, that:

1. Whereas the over-all death rate in United States from tuberculosis in recent annual toll statistics was 40.1 per 100,000 population, the comparative Indian death rate was 211.9.

2. Similarly, pneumonia's death toll rate was 51.8 for the entire population to 123.6 among Indians.

3. Syphilis, which claimed 10.7 of every 100,000 general population, attacked the Indian tribes more than twice as hard, with a death rate of 22.4.

4. And infant mortality, at 41.4 for the general population, averaged 135.1 deaths per 100,000 Indian infants during the same year.

Admitting that the economic and social level of American Indians living on Government reservations is a compelling factor in death rate differentials, Dr. Foard said the Indians' medical lot could be much improved by preventive medicine.

Nine Health Departments

It was for this reason, he said, that he proposed that Congress be asked for funds to establish nine "complete, fulltime agency health departments." Each would consist of a public health officer, a public health engineer, a sanitation officer, visiting public health nurses and clerical assistants.

The proposal, he said, was flatly rejected by the "economy-minded" Budget Office.

To show the need and justification for such measures, Dr. Foard pointed out that the first county health team of similar proportion was established in 1911, in Yakima County, Wash. Since then, he said, some 1800 of the Nation's 3030 counties have set up similar systems.

"But for the Indians," declared Dr. Foard, "there has never been a similar effort of preventive medical service on any reservation in the United States."

Dr. Foard said his health department does employ public health nurses for field service, but has been able to fill only 50 of the 90 positions because such service does not appeal to the profession "which has so many other, and more attractive, jobs to fill."

Neither trained public health officers nor sanitarians, he said, are now or have ever been employed for general public health work on Indian reservations.

Still Unnecessarily High

While trachoma, an eye infection causing partial to complete blindness, has been greatly reduced among Indians since advent of the sulfa drugs, the disease is still "unnecessarily high" among Indians in isolated areas. It could be "completely stamped out," Dr. Foard said, if public health facilities were available to locate the cases and bring them to treatment, since the infection requires but about 10 days to cure.

The Bureau of Indian Affairs maintains 62 hospitals in continental United States, and 8 in Alaska. About 40 per cent of all cases entered in those hospitals, the bureau's health director said, are for the treatment of diseases which are recognized as preventable.

The hospitals, offering medical care to the Nation's 250,000 reservation Indians, range from 327 beds, the largest, to 20-bed institutions. Some of these are being run without even one full-time physician, and many others with no full-time nurses, Dr. Foard said. He pointed out that of 101 full-time positions for medical officers available in the department, 48 are now vacant.

The Gallup Poll

Voters Want Federal Housing, Slum Aid

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Jan. 13.—The President's ideas on Federal aid to housing are popular in principle with the majority of voters polled by the Institute. But attitudes are largely conditioned by the question of the cost of the program.

If it were to involve any appreciable extra cost to the taxpayers in the form of higher taxes, enthusiasm diminishes appreciably, especially among home owners.

This is shown in replies to the following questions put to 3035 voters in the coast-to-coast poll:

"It has been suggested that the new Congress should provide Government money for slum clearance and low-rent housing. Do you think Congress should or should not provide this money?"

A summary of the total vote and of the vote among those questioned who own their homes and those who rent is given below.

	Owners	Renters	Total
Should	61%	78%	69%
Should not	29	13	21
No opinion	10	9	10

The second question was designed to find out how many of these people might change their minds if it appeared that the program would involve higher taxation for them.

"Would you yourself be willing to pay higher taxes to do this?"

The national vote shows a close division of opinion, with a comparatively small margin in the affirmative. Among home owners, however, the weight of sentiment runs the other way.

In his State of the Union message President Truman promised to "extend and strengthen rent control." That aspect of the housing program meets with almost universal approval by persons questioned in the survey, as might be expected from the fact that the vast majority of Americans are not landlords.

Prince Georges Debt Ceiling Up $400,000

By Phil Austensen
Post Reporter

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 13.—First law enacted by Maryland's 1949 General Assembly was passed today.

It increased the indebtedness ceiling for Special Improvement Districts in Prince Georges County to $1,200,000. The present limit is $800,000.

It is expected to be signed early next week by Gov. William Preston Lane, jr.

The bill, presented by the Prince Georges delegation in the House last Monday, was the first bill introduced at this session, and its passage was hurried because Carole Highlands Special Improvement District in the county is awaiting the increased debt limit to get needed street and drainage improvements.

Both the House and the Senate adjourned this afternoon until 8 p. m. Monday.

During the brief afternoon session, the legislators decided to call a holiday next Thursday to enable General Assembly members to attend President Truman's inauguration in Washington.

"There are a lot of people here who have never seen an inauguration," commented House Majority Leader Leroy Pumphrey (D., Prince Georges), "and it may be the last chance for some of the others."

Among other measures acted upon was an emergency bill to permit oyster dredge boats to operate the remainder of the season. A Dorchester County court case against owners of dredge boats weighing more than 10½ tons is scheduled tomorrow. The measure passed today would allow them to get licenses valid until March 31 in Dorchester, Talbot and Somerset Counties.

Among the measures introduced today was a resolution by Senator Roy T. Davis (R., Montgomery County), asking the General Assembly to approve a ceremony honoring founders of republics in the Western Hemisphere. According to the resolution, the ceremony would be held February 22, George Washington's birthday.

Another measure introduced by Montgomery County's all-Republican delegation—was a bill providing for a referendum on whether Montgomery County shall have an elected, rather than an appointed, school board.

The bill, as introduced, provides for a referendum November 8. The bill was sent to the Judiciary Committee for committee action.

Senator Louis L. Goldstein (D., Calvert), introduced a bill calling for a constitutional referendum to make mandatory the election or naming of a circuit court judge for every county in Maryland.

He pointed out that five counties, Garrett, Charles, Kent, Talbot and Somerset, do not have judges and that if a bill now pending to abolish orphans courts is enacted the new courts would be needed.

Meanwhile, House bill 76, which would provide for retention of the present rate of income tax in Maryland, instead of increasing it this year to 2½ per cent as directed by present law, was reported on favorably by the Ways and Means Committee and sent to third reading.

Delegate Horace Whitworth (R., Allegany) said he is preparing a bill to require the University of Maryland to account to the General Assembly for the $500,000 in Federal funds received annually.

He said the budget of the university is passed on by the Legislature but no report is made of Federal funds although they are audited by the State comptroller and the State Board of Public Works.

Television for Driver Of Auto Faces Ban

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 13 (AP).—Back seat drivers may enjoy television programs, but the man at the wheel will still have to keep his eyes on the road, if a bill being drawn up for presentation in the Legislature becomes law.

Delegates Horace Whitworth (R., Allegany), Leroy W. Preston (D., Baltimore 5th), and Julian P. King (R., Montgomery), will sponsor a measure to prohibit operation in Maryland of any motor vehicle equipped with a television screen in view of the driver.

It would be permissible to place the screen anywhere in the car out of the driver's sight, though, under the proposed legislation.

Bill Would Repeal Md. 'Jim Crow' Law

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 13 (AP).—Three Republican Senators today introduced a bill in the Maryland General Assembly to scrap Maryland's "Jim Crow" law.

The State's "Jim Crow" law requires separate sections for whites and Negroes in all trains and steamboats operating entirely within the State.

Senators Daniel Ellison (Baltimore 4th), Roy T. Davis (Montgomery) and Robert B. Kimble (Allegany) introduced the repealer bill.

Lane to Discuss Plans For Mental Hospitals

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 13 (AP).—Governor Lane announced today he will offer for reaction to superintendents of Maryland's mental hospitals his plans for improving conditions in the institutions.

The governor will confer with the five superintendents and other medical authorities tomorrow morning.

The "deplorable conditions" in the mental hospitals have been the subject of frequent remarks in the General Assembly now in session and the demands for improvements strong. The Governor has promised to deliver a special message to the legislators on his proposed remedies.

Montgomery Seats Council on Monday

The seven-member Montgomery County Council-Elect is tentatively slated to take office at 9:30 a. m. Monday in Rockville, Thomas C. Kelley, council president pro tem, said yesterday.

Immediately after the swearing-in ceremony, the new council will hold its first official meeting, Kelley said.

Elected January 6, the council has been delayed in taking office by a State law which prescribes the official vote canvass be made the Thursday following the election.

The official count, conducted yesterday, gave the election results substantially the same as unofficial tallies, with the seven Charter Committee candidates winners.

The official count gave Thomas C. Kelley, 8753 votes; P. G. Ligon, 8632; Mrs. Dorothy S. Himstead, 8519; Frederic P. Lee, 8328; J. Douglas Bradshaw, 8159; Lewis Meriam, 7780; Augustus R. Selby, 7514; Charles K. Davies, jr., 1721; Mrs. Alma T. Opal, 1654, and Romeo W. Horad, 1481. A total of 10,188 votes were cast.

Before swearing-in ceremonies can be held, Kelley said, official warrants of office must be obtained from Annapolis, the State capital. The warrants are to be returned by special messenger in time for the induction Monday.

The Senate Finance Committee yesterday named five of its members to serve on the Senate-House Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation.

They are Senators George (Ga.), Connally (Tex.) and Byrd (Va.) Democrats, and Millikin (Colo.) and Taft (Ohio), Republicans.

Senate Votes President's Pay Boost; Kills D. C. Hike Move

mended by the Senate Civil Service Committee, to give classified District workers the $330 annual pay boost that other classified employes in the Federal service got last July. The District boost would have been retroactive to that date for the 7600 classified city workers.

But Flanders' move ran into a crossfire of opposition. Lucas, as acting majority floor leader, had told the Senate that the paring of the bill to the three top jobs had been made necessary by the fact that the House had not yet organized its committees. House action is to be sought by a suspension of the rules, a move that can get under way by a two thirds vote, and which would avoid the usual committee consideration of the bill. The Presidential pay hike cannot become effective for President Truman unless it is law before he is inaugurated for his new term.

From the Republican side, Senator Kenneth Wherry (R., Nebr.), minority floor leader, pointed out to Flanders that the Senate Republican Policy Committee in the morning had agreed to support immediate action only on the pay increases for President, Vice President and the Speaker.

Senator Harry P. Cain (R., Wash.) protested the Flanders proposal on two counts. First, said Cain, there would be no money to pay for it, because the Senate last year had failed to approve a District sales tax. Second, Cain objected that the Flanders proposals would leave out all the District's 11,000 unclassified employes. These include firemen, policemen and teachers, whose salaries are fixed in acts separate from those dealing with classified employes.

Stresses Importance

Flanders said it was "overwhelmingly important from the standpoint of simple justice" for District employes to get their belated pay increase. "We should and must find funds to place these employes who live in the most expensive city in the country on an equal footing with those classified employes in the rest of the country," said Flanders.

Cain insisted that it would be better to handle the pay problem for all 18,000 District employes at once. Then he asked where the revenue would come from to pay for the increases for the classified employes—an immediate expense of more than two million dollars. He charged that the proposed District sales tax had been filibustered to defeat in the Senate last year, and he asked "how far can we go in or out of the District in passing measures intended to help people without having the faintest, slightest idea where the money is coming from?"

Flanders' proposal to pay the classified District employes was defeated by a voice vote.

Sharpest argument of the day was touched off by Senator Donnell's demand that the President, Vice President and Speaker account in detail for their new expense allowances. He said it was not sound policy to give a substantial allowance to a public official and require no accounting.

Lucas recalled that two years ago Senators and Representatives had voted themselves a pay increase that included a $2500 annual expense allowance for which they did not have to account, and which was tax free.

Donnell said he had voted for that, but had made a mistake when he did so, and believed it would now be proper to amend the law and require an accounting from Congressmen of their expense money.

Senators Wayne Morse (R., Oreg.) and John J. Williams (R., Del.) joined with Donnell in sponsoring the plan for an accounting of the expense money.

Morse protested, too, that some of the salaries proposed in the committee bill were entirely too high for the service rendered.

"People shouldn't be encouraged to go into Government to make a good living," said Morse. "I think they ought to make a decent living. There is entirely too much high living in Washington on the part of Government officials—high Government officials. Cocktail parties that cost $500 and $1000 should not be considered as part of the job of Government service. What Washington, D. C., needs is some simple living.

"One doesn't have to rub shoulders with the rank and file very much to detect the resentment at the extravagant living that's come to characterize so much of official life in the District. Some of this is not setting a good example so far as the simple, democratic life in America is concerned."

Tax Exemption Protested

Senator Williams protested the tax-exempt feature of the proposed presidential expense allowance. He said it would give him a take-home pay of about $93,000, the equivalent of a $500,000 annual salary if that were all taxed. Senator Homer E. Capehart (R., Ind.) made a similar protest.

But Senator Flanders took issue with them. He said the details of the presidential pay plan had been suggested "by that sterling New Deal Democrat, former President Hoover." He said the former Republican President had estimated it costs $25,000 to $30,000 a year to run the White House.

"Talk about take-home pay of $95,000," said Flanders, "there's no such thing for the President."

Lucas attacked Donnell's accounting proposal with the charge that "to me it's preposterous that we should spend all this time and charge the President of the United States would not spend the expense allowance, accurately, fairly and honestly."

Donnell said he had made no such charge, "but the stockholders of America have a right to know how their money is spent."

Senator Milliken attacked the Donnell proposal, saying it would make the President carry a notebook and itemize every nickel he spent.

In turn, Donnell and Morse announced their opposition to the Millikin plan for an unitemized certification by the President of his expenses. Morse said that would be just "an empty form."

As a final note, Williams proposed that the bill be trimmed of the President's expense allowance, and the salary hikes for Vice President and Speaker, but he withdrew that proposal.

Lucas at one point announced he had talked Wednesday night with President Truman. He said the President still would rather see all the other pay raises passed than have his own salary increased. "I assured him," said Lucas, "that the moment we passed this bill I'd introduce a measure dealing with all those other positions."

Senator Olin D. Johnston (D., S. C.), chairman of the Senate Civil Service Committee, said there would be early hearings on the new Lucas bill. "We'll put into the bill many other positions that ought to be there," Johnston said.

CAB Orders Suspension Of Airmail Pickups

The Civil Aeronautics Board yesterday ordered suspension of All-American Airways airmail pickup operations next July 1, 10 years after the start of the unique service.

The action affects 1500 miles of routes stemming spoke-like from Pittsburgh to Cincinnati, Ohio; Jamestown, N. Y.; Williamsport and Philadelphia, Pa., with scores of intermediate pickup points, including many communities without airports.

At the same time the board gave All-American a three-year certificate to provide passenger-mail-cargo service over much of the pickup area, a move toward expansion of conventional operations by the airline.

Women's Clubs May Boycott Rita Hayworth

Chicago, Jan. 13 (U.P.).—The motion picture chairman of the General Federation of Women's Clubs said today that Actress Rita Hayworth's future motion pictures should be boycotted.

"I don't think that in view of her affair with Aly Khan she should be allowed to go on making films," Mrs. Joseph R. Chesser of Chicago said.

She said she was drawing up a boycott statement for approval by the general headquarters of the federation in Washington. If approved, she said, it will be distributed to women's clubs throughout the country.

Landlord Acquitted by Jury in Murder Case On Plea of Self-Defense in Tenant Shooting

Rudolph Miller, 50, of 1916 2d st. nw., was acquitted yesterday of a first-degree murder indictment in the shotgun slaying of Rufus A. Armstrong, 27.

Miller claimed self-defense before a jury in the District Court of Judge Henry A. Schweinhaut. The jury deliberated three hours before returning the not guilty verdict.

Miller was resident landlord of the 2d street house and had sought court eviction of Armstrong. According to Miller, Armstrong became offensive and threatening after the unsuccessful eviction suit.

On September 9, the date of the shooting, Armstrong approached Miller and reached as if to grab a weapon from a pocket, it was testified. Miller then fired the shotgun.

Mother-Killer Gets 3 to 15-Year Sentence

James W. Hawkins, jr., 23, was sentenced yesterday to serve 3 to 15 years in prison for killing his 44-year-old mother last July.

Judge David A. Pine of District Court imposed sentence, saying he saw little reason to give more leniency than "already shown by the jury." Hawkins was indicted for first-degree murder but the jury returned a verdict of manslaughter which carries a maximum of 5 to 15 years.

Hawkins, a bricklayer, was drunk at the time of the slaying, according to evidence. He returned to the family home at 605 Sheridan st. nw., and during a violent argument, stabbed the mother, Mrs. Evelyn Hawkins, with a butcher knife. He claimed his mother had come after him with a knife in a drunken rage.

Judge Pine commented that while drunkenness was no legal excuse, yet it was the cause for the "lack of discretion" on the part of the defendant. He also pointed out that Hawkins spent six months in jail awaiting trial.

State Rule Of Tidelands Is Favored

By The Associated Press

The National Petroleum Council, stepping hard on the Interior Department's toes, yesterday recommended State rather than Federal control of tidelands.

The council also said the Federal Government should stay out of the synthetic liquid fuels field except for fundamental research and surveys of raw material reserves.

Interior, along with the Justice Department, is battling California, Texas and Louisiana for the right to rich off-shore oil-bearing lands. It also is carrying out an ambitious synthetic fuels program.

The Supreme Court, in a California case, has held that the Federal Government's interest in the tidelands is "paramount."

Krug Asked Policy

The council, composed of industry leaders, was established by the Interior Department to advise it on petroleum matters.

Secretary of the Interior Krug asked the council last July to recommend a sound national oil policy for consideration by Congress.

The council, at its quarterly meeting yesterday, presented a proposed policy drafted by a 24-man committee headed by A. Jacobson, New York City, president of the Amerada Petroleum Corp.

Some of the other recommendations:

1. The Government should stockpile only enough oil for the early stages of a war. Peacetime stockpiling on a large scale is unnecessary and impractical.

2. Maintenance of a healthy domestic oil industry should be paramount. The industry should be assured an adequate supply of essential materials.

3. Participation of Americans in development of world oil resources 'is in the interest of all nations."

4. Oil from abroad should be available to the United States as needed, but too great use of imports would retard domestic exploration and development.

Favors Competition

5. The oil industry should be competitive under incentives of private enterprise. The Government should confine itself to safeguarding the public interest, and should encourage private capital by "appropriate tax provisions and public land policies."

6. No. Government actions specifically affecting the oil industry should be taken without consultation with the industry. The difficulty of meeting postwar demands was due mainly to wartime restrictions, and gave some people the false impression that the Nation was faced with a permanent oil shortage requiring special measures.

The council said of tidelands:

"State authorities have proved effective in their protection of the public welfare and State regulation (of petroleum) has evolved as the most effective answer to the problem of the widely dispersed natural resource . . .

"Federal laws and regulations, with final authority far removed from the scene of operations, have tended to discourage exploration for oil underlying Federal lands and to retard its discovery."

776 Teachers Average $3712 InMontgomery

An average of $3,712 is being paid this school year to 776 Montgomery County school teachers, the Board of Education said yesterday in its annual report.

The present salary schedule is "fairly adequate," the report said.

Dr. Edwin W. Broome, county school superintendent, said however, not all teachers are on the pay schedule, with only about one-half on the schedule next year.

The present schedule, according to the report, is: without a degree, $2200 to $4000; with a bachelor's degree, $2500 to $4800, and with a master's degree, $2700 to $5300.

Approximately 65 to 75 additional teachers will be needed each year for the next five years to meet increased enrollment, and 40 to 50 for replacement purposes, the report said.

County school funds, it was declared, come from the county, State and Federal governments in the ratio of 64.8 per cent, 32.7 per cent, and 2.5 per cent, respectively.

The report recommended as desirable new services, the following: classes for children with cerebral palsy, a school psychologist, a school psychiatric service, services of a trained social worker, a researcher to diagnose scientifically pupil difficulties and to measure the effectiveness of teaching, clinical services for certain groups of children who present unique problems, and organization of small classes for children with special learning difficulties.

Officials Meet In Manassas on Tech's Future

Thirty-five school and county officials from six northern Virginia areas met at Manassas yesterday to discuss the future of the Manassas Technical School which must be placed on a regional basis by July 1.

The school is owned by the Prince William County School Board and is operated with funds from State and Federal Governments. It offers vocational training to more than 200 students from seven northern Virginia counties.

Net result of yesterday's meeting was setting up of a committee to study the advisability of joint ownership of the school and to decide how much of the operating cost each county should bear.

The committee will consist of one member of the school board and governing body from each area represented yesterday—Prince William, Fairfax, Stafford, Culpeper, Fauquier counties and Alexandria. Members will be appointed by the local bodies. The committee's report, after it is prepared, will go to the local school boards for approval.

Thus far, the State has borne all operating expenses of the school, Principal Daniel M. Kelso said, and the counties turned over to it what money they took in, chiefly from Federal sources for veterans.

After July 1, however, the State will put up only two-thirds of the cost, he said, and the veteran enrollment is dropping off, thus reducing county revenue. The State has stipulated that by that date ownership of the school be spread among the participating communities if it continues its aid. The school was formerly known as the Manassas Vocational School.

Private School Faces Suit for $15,000 Rent

A $15,000 suit for nonpayment of rent and property damage was filed yesterday in Montgomery County Circuit Court against the Honeywell Foundation, a fashionable private school in Bethesda.

Plaintiffs were Doris C. Lowe and Pooks Hill, Inc., owners of the Pooks Hill estate on Rockville Pike, where Crown Princess Martha, of Norway, sojourned during World War II.

Listed as defendants were Dr. Donald W. Honeywell and Col. Frederick Jones Davies, operators of the school, which was conducted at Pooks Hill last year. On December 16, 1947, the school was burned out of an estate built by the late Evalyn Walsh McLean at Bradley blvd. and Wilson lane.

A one-year lease was given the school when it moved into Pooks Hill. Monthly rental agreed upon, according to the suit, was $1000. The rent was paid until June but has not been paid since, the suit said.

The plaintiff's also listed extensive property damage and asked the court to force the school to make reimbursement.

New Tchaikovsky Work Reported Discovered

Moscow, Jan. 13 (AP).—A Russian professor has announced the discovery of an unpublished work by the Russian composer, Peter Ilich Tchaikovsky.

It is a cantata written in 1872 to mark the bicentenary of the birth of Peter the Great.

He said the work, discovered in the Tchaikovsky home near Klin, now a museum, was written for orchestra, chorus and solo (tenor).

I can't see paying 2 to 3 cents extra just for the "squeeze bag" when I buy margarine!
Nor I! Give me delicious "bowl-mix" Nucoa...It colors so evenly!
True! NO TRICK-PACKAGE COST TACKED ONTO NUCOA . . . YOU PAY ONLY FOR QUALITY . . .
(And you can "bowl-mix" two pounds together as quickly as one!)

Experienced housewives from Maine to California tell us:

The real way to save money and time is to let one trip to the store, one quick "bowl-mix," give you two pounds of delicious Nucoa ready to serve. This way you do the coloring job half as often, and it's twice as quick as "squeeze mixing" one at a time!

Of course, what you—and we—hope, is that SOON you won't have to color margarine at all. Until then, we promise that not one penny of trick-package cost will be added to Nucoa. Your grocer will continue to have this top-quality margarine at modest price, ready for you to "bowl-mix" the shade of yellow you like and mold as you please for attractive servings.

Yellow Nucoa also available in quarter-pound prints at many stores. Due to Federal taxes and license fees, yellow Nucoa costs more than white Nucoa, but regular or yellow, it's the same delicious product.

Mental Care Fund Short by $665,000

District Commissioners will be asked soon to approve a deficiency appropriation of some $665,000 to meet District obligations to St. Elizabeths Hospital, it was learned yesterday.

The deficit, in contrast to last year's extra appropriation of $273,000, is largely due to a rate increase at the hospital for the care of the city's indigent mental patients, said John W. Tramburg, Director of Public Welfare.

Although estimated cash needs to meet obligations for the current fiscal year, ending June 30, have not been fully checked, he said, present computations show the expected deficit will be $664,537.

Federally operated St. Elizabeths charges the District at the rate of $4.15 a patient-day, with the bill paid out of the budget allotted the Department of Public Welfare. The present rate became effective last July 1, beginning of the current fiscal year.

However, explained the welfare director, the current appropriation was allocated on the old hospitalization cost basis of $3.90 a patient-day. And with almost 5000 District patients under treatment, the increase becomes a considerable item, Tramburg said.

Adding further to expenses not expected at the time this year's budget request was drawn up and the funds appropriated, he said, is the increase in patient load brought about by recent admissions under voluntary and direct admission laws passed by Congress.

The laws, which became effective last summer, permit District residents to be admitted for treatment on their own requests, or on petitions of citizens for mental examinations and hospitalization.

Last month, welfare officials said, the District was paying for the care of 4925 patients at St. Elizabeths, of the institution's total patient load of about 6200.

Koussevitsky, 'in Great Mood,' Rouses Orchestra to Heights

By Paul Hume

Adoration is reserved for the Deity, but we revere the name and greatness of Serge Koussevitsky, who led his Boston Symphony Orchestra last night in Constitution Hall.

For 25 great years the mighty Russian conductor formed one of the miraculous orchestral instruments of our time, stamping it with the unique genius of his personality. No living conductor has done more for the cause of new music in this country or abroad, nor are there many who can stand with him on the pinnacle among mountain peaks to which his achievements entitle him.

All the facets of Koussevitsky's remarkable talents were on display last night, except for a sample of his magic in French repertoire. Modern music from America, which he has always championed, a barbaric score from Prokofieff, whose protagonist he has so often been, and standard classics by Vivaldi and Brahms exhibited the scope and polish of Koussevitsky's gifts.

It was a stroke of program planning to include Aaron Copland's Lincoln Portrait in a Washington concert only six days before a President of the United States is to be inaugurated. Copland treats music of our native soil as a frame for some of the Emancipator's most prophetic words. These were stirringly delivered last night by Wesley Addy.

What thoughts the great President's utterances must have stirred in the minds of such listeners as the daughter of our President, or the exiled King Peter of Yugoslavia. What thoughts may they have stirred in the hearts of the owners of the very hall in which they were spoken, where to this day, those whose fredom became so important to Lincoln are still refused appearance.

These and more purely musical considerations must have mingled in Koussevitsky's mind, who recently described Copland's work in these terms: "Is is based on the great words of the Gettysburg Address, which should be repeatedly heard by this Nation and the world at large, and to which A. Copland wrote a music deeply moving in its simpliciy and sincerity."

Throughout the evening Koussevitsky was in a great mood. Vivaldi, the first music he conducted in this country, was sustained in its nobility. The Prokofieff became a powerful frenzy, always controlled, and yet always seeming to burst its bounds. And the Brahms symphony moved in a heroic vein, lightened by the slow song of the second movement, and the guided pacing of the third.

When Koussevitsky's twenty-ninth concert in Washington came to an end the audience rose and cheered while the beloved man returned time and again to the platform. His orchestra stood with him, and then it was over. We hope that there will be more Koussevitsky concerts in Washington, for there will not be another like him.

Reporter's Apartment Is Damaged by Blaze

Slight damage was caused to two rooms of a Times-Herald reporter's apartment yesterday afternoon by fire which broke out while no one was at home.

The blaze originated in the kitchen, according to Lieut. Richard M. Kuster of No. 1 Engine Company, and spread along the ceiling to the living room. The cause was not immediately determined, he said.

2 Bus Firms Raise Fares Saturday

Passenger fare increases over most of the bus system of Safeway Trails, Inc., and local trips on the Pennsylvania-Greyhound bus lines will go into effect on Saturday, ranging up to 10 per cent.

Both companies, raising commuter rates between here and Baltimore under a tariff filed in December with the Interstate Commerce Commission, are also introducing new seven-day commuter tickets between these and intermediate points.

The present commuter fare for 30-day, 10-ride tickets between Washington and Baltimore will be increased from $4.40 to $6.30, while the seven-day fare for the same number of rides will be $4.95 on either line. Commuter tickets from intermediate points will be raised by about the same percentage.

The one-way fare between here and New York will go up from $3.85 to $4.05 on the Safeway buses; between Baltimore and here, from 80 to 85 cents; between here and Philadelphia, from $2.25 to $2.40, and between here and Lancaster, from $2.20 to $2.40. The fare to Reading, increased last fall, will not be changed.

The Safeway Trails increases are the first general ones since 1942, according to a spokesman, and bring fares into line with those charged by competitors, he said.

Police Ambush Chinese Pirates On River Steamer

Hongkong, Jan. 13 (U.P.).—Crewmen of the river passenger steamer Kwaishan noticed an unusually large number of passengers aboard but thought nothing more of it.

Fifteen of the passengers were pirates who intended to capture the vessel.

Several times that number were police who intended to capture the pirates.

Today the pirates tried to seize the vessel and ran into a police ambush. Four pirates were killed, two were wounded, seven were arrested and two others jumped overboard.

Truman to Receive Victory Dinner Guests

Out-of-town guests who attend the Democrats' Jefferson-Jackson victory dinner here February 24 will get a chance to meet President and Mrs. Truman at a reception the next day, according to dinner committee chairman Wilson W. Wyatt.

Wyatt said the reception, to be held in the Presidential Room of the Statler Hotel, was arranged because the out-of-towners would not be able to shake hands with the President during the dinner.

He said the dinner will be staged in the Mayflower and Statler Hotels, with Mr. Truman dropping in on both gatherings.

At the same meeting, the musicians appointed Pianist Sylvia Altman to head a committee on labor unions to "apprise union membership in all fields of the value of maintaining a resident orchestra."

Of Friendship

There is not the least reason to believe that Mr. Dean Acheson damaged his cause before the Senate by his bold and forthright acknowledgment to the Foreign Relations Committee of his continued friendship for Donald and Alger Hiss. Loyalty to friends who are in trouble has almost universally been recognized as one of the greatest, and, some say, rarest, of virtues. What Mr. Acheson said about his friendship not being easily won nor easily withdrawn had the sound of nobility, and indeed might have been taken word for word from the Nicomachean Ethics.

There is no doubt that Mr. Alger Hiss is at this moment in trouble deep enough to test the sincerity and devotion of his friends. He has been accused of an outrageous betrayal of the confidence imposed in him as an official of the Government. In the case of Mr. Donald Hiss no evidence has been adduced to give plausibility to the charge. Mr. Alger Hiss, however, has been indicted for perjury in New York, because a Federal grand jury there was satisfied that he had actually delivered highly confidential documents of the Department of State to Mr. Whittaker Chambers, who says that he was then a Soviet espionage agent. Fair-minded men, as we have said before, will suspend judgment of Mr. Hiss' guilt or innocence until all the evidence has been heard. Like any other citizen under accusation, he is entitled to the presumption of innocence until his trial has been completed. Mr. Hiss' personal friends, then, are certainly entitled to make the same presumption in his favor.

To be sure, the charges against Mr. Alger Hiss are of so grave a nature as to require that every highly placed Government officer place himself beyond even the suspicion of reproach. But this Mr. Acheson, in disposing of the confusions and errors in the testimony of Mr. Adolf Berle before the House Un-American Activities Committee, has certainly done.

Military Money

Already the klaxons are sounding on Capitol Hill as the partisans of one or another military project prepare for an assault on the President's defense budget. For Mr. Truman has stuck to his guns and has recommended expenditures within the 15-billion-dollar ceiling he set some time ago. The total military outlay for fiscal 1950 is put at approximately 14.3 billions, including 13.1 billions in direct military expenditures, as well as 525 millions for stockpiling of critical materials and 600 millions for the first year of universal military training which the President hopes Congress will enact. Some confusion undoubtedly will arise over the President's request for a total of 15.9 billions in obligational authority. However, not all of this is chargeable to the 1950 budget. Apparently Mr. Truman believes with the Eberstadt Committee that a lot of defense can be had within the limit of 15 billion dollars.

This represents the first attempt to present to Congress a truly integrated program of military expenditures. The needs of each service have been weighed and fitted into the unified request. Obviously the projected budget is a checkrein on the wishes of some of the military planners. It means a cutback in the degree of rearmament, though generally it permits the operation of the various services at approximately their present levels. For example, although the number of regular air groups will be reduced from 59 to 48, the size of some of these groups has been increased. Some reduction will be necessary in support aircraft, but the number of combat planes will be maintained at almost the present strength.

The President's proposals, of course, are not sacrosanct. On one point in particular his program seems to us unrealistic. Universal military training is a desirable goal, particularly as a means of channeling trained men into the reserves, which now are a weak point in the defense establishment. But with the draft in operation, UMT has lost much of its urgent appeal, and there is small likelihood that Congress will pay more than lip service to the President's wishes on this score. Therefore, the money earmarked for UMT might well be diverted to other needs so as to prevent actual cutbacks. In aircraft procurement especially, any positive reduction in the present rate of production could be wasteful.

The important thing about the budget is that it encompasses a balanced program arrived at by the three services themselves. It does not attempt to equate the various instrumentalities of defense or to divide the money evenly. Rather, it seeks to develop a unified defense team, with adequate support from all services of any undertaking, irrespective of what arm has the primary role. This is perhaps the most distinctive feature of the military budget, and by the same token it is the feature which Capitol Hill zealots, particularly the proponents of all-out air power, are most likely to lose sight of. The program can be distorted out of proportion only at the peril of ending up with a star halfback but a lame team.

Eastern Union

The movement toward Eastern Union which has been fomented by Dutch police action in Indonesia is a movement that deserves prime and careful attention. One of the great historical movements of these turbulent times is the revolt of Asia. This was inevitable, as Macaulay foresaw, when the colonial proprietors introduced Western education. A forcing bed has been provided by two world wars, especially by the last war, when the proprietors were thrown out of their fiefs by the power of Asiatic Japan. "Face" is all important in Asia, and the colonial powers lost their ability "to cozen, coerce, and scare" when Japan had her brief moment as ruler of Asia. To be sure, in these circumstances the Western powers never expected to return to their prewar position in Asia. But they seem to be trying to brake the pace of independence, using as justification the trail of communism which is winding in and out of Asia's nascent nationalism. Indeed, to many Americans a tacit understanding appears to have grown up among the various colonial offices in western Europe to go easy with one another in the event of embroilment. This understanding leaps to the eyes in the case of Indonesia.

The United States cannot afford to be party to any such understanding. At one time we had hoped that the colonial proprietors and America might come to an agreement over a program of moral and material aid to Asia during the transition period and of protection of legitimate interests. But the action in Indonesia seems to have ruled out the hope, for it was taken unilaterally, without anything that could be called a warning to either the United Nations or the United States. This was unusual for the Dutch. Hitherto there has been consultation, and in this respect the United States is reputed to have done a service last September to both the Dutch and the Indonesians. It is said to have restrained Dutch intervention when the Republicans were putting down a Communist outbreak, as they did with speed and success. This time the Dutch did not invite consultation, so that, till the Western powers can find terms on which to collaborate in Asia, the United States must develop and apply its own Asia policy.

For that purpose this country needs to find out what is going on in the minds of such Asiatic leaders as Nehru and Sjahrir. The job calls for precisely the same kind of appointment as Britain made when it sent Mr. Malcolm MacDonald to southeast Asia with the rank of commissioner general. A constructive policy is impossible to determine on the basis of reports from men in the field whose local positions do not enable them to think regionally or continentally. If, as the Dutch Queen said recently, colonialism is dead, policy must be based on that assumption, not on rearguard actions. This requires that the westerners win the confidence of the leaders of the embryonic Eastern Union for a common effort in encouraging political maturity and economic stability and at the same time of combating communism. Our main concern is to drive a wedge between nationalism and communism, but that will never be done as long as we look at the nationalists as potential Communists, and restrict ourselves to anti-communism without any accompanying pro-independence.

OEEC's Message

Plans without policies to back them up are meaningless. That is the gist of the message brought to Washington by Secretary General Marjolin of the Organization for European Economic Cooperation. M. Margolin emphasized the fact that the OEEC's estimate of a three-billion-dollar deficit in the trade balances of the 19 participating countries in 1952 did not mean that Europe expected the United States to provide post-Marshall Plan aid to cover any such deficit. The purpose was rather to underline the dangers of a laissez faire policy that would force these countries to make drastic cuts in imports when the ECA goes out of business. The report assumes that the recovery program will end in 1952, as scheduled; its primary aim is to force individual governments to take immediate steps to stabilize their currencies and strengthen domestic and continental economy.

The importance of currency stabilization can hardly be overemphasized, for unsound currency systems disrupt internal price relationships, retard domestic recovery, and interfere with the revival of international trade, which is the end objective of the recovery program. Currency stability cannot be achieved, however, by any sleight-of-hand performance, or even by drastic reforms involving forced reductions in the volume of money and revaluation of the currency unit. The Germans in the western occupied zones are discovering that fact; with internal prices rising rapidly, in spite of the introduction of a new and supposedly stabilized currency, there is already talk of another reform to correct price maladjustments. France, too, is learning that currency stability cannot be maintained, if French prices and wages continue to rise. Consequently the French cabinet has just decreed that wages shall not rise above December 31 levels and has ordered the lowering of some prices.

The French decree is another of those superficial remedies for currency disorders that may momentarily arrest progressive inflation. But an all-out effort on many fronts is required to achieve permanent currency stabilization. Taxes must be high enough to prevent deficits from undermining the purchasing power of money. And to obtain needed tax revenues, it is essential for ECA countries to pursue policies that stimulate production and to sacrifice immediate comforts in order to make increased production possible. The sacrifices entailed are undeniably great when, as is the case with most European countries, a large part of the increased production is required to emancipate countries with trade deficits from chronic dependence on outside aid. Only an understanding of these underlying implications of currency stability makes it possible to realize the prime importance of currency reform both as a means of assisting European recovery and as a means of testing the efficacy of national recovery programs.

Price Support

The section of the budget message devoted to farm price support recommendations will be gloomy reading for supporters of the 90 per cent parity program. Conversely it provides heavy ammunition for the use of those favoring lower, less rigid, support prices. A year ago the President said that, for the time being high farm prices made price support outlays unnecessary except for a few commodities, such as eggs and potatoes. But he warned that larger outlays would be required if markets were to weaken.

Meantime, sharp declines in the prices of wheat, corn and cotton have brought prices of those commodities down to support levels and consequently stocks acquired by the Commodity Credit Corporation under loan or repurchase agreements are piling up. For instance, the cotton carryover at the end of the next marketing year may be as much as six million bales or double the mid-1948 carryover. Since price-support encourages farmers to increase acreage, in spite of official advice to the contrary, it is expected that production of wheat, corn and cotton will again be very large. Indeed, the President stated in his budget message that they would "probably again exceed anticipated domestic and export requirements, even assuming lower yields per acre than in 1948."

As a result of record-breaking crops in 1948, CCC outlays for the fiscal year 1949 are expected to amount to 866 million dollars—in striking contrast to the 200 million dollars of net receipts reported for 1948. Outlays for 1950 are tentatively placed at 538 million dollars, but expenditures will, the President admits, be considerably higher if this year's crops are as large as last year's.

Again the public is reminded forcibly of the fact that the cost of running a government is largely predetermined by the kind of legislation that the public wants. If it prefers a system of agricultural price supports that is a direct incentive to overproduction—that is, production in excess of demand at supported price levels—it must be prepared to meet the costs of the system.

While CCC loans and funds expended for outright purchase of farm products may later be offset by repayment of loans and sales of stored surpluses, there is no assurance that market conditions will permit the agency to unload its holdings without loss or disruption of the artificial price structure it is endeavoring to maintain. The recent war was a godsend from the viewpoint of the CCC. But nobody would welcome the prospect of another World War, even if it did temporarily solve bothersome crop surplus problems.

Peron's Citizens

President Peron's supernationalist cult in Argentina has cooked up a new restriction that bodes a nasty international tangle. Among the propositions presented to the new Constituent Assembly—called for the thinly disguised purpose of "legalizing" Peron's continuation in office—is a constitutional amendment that would require foreigners who spend two years in the country to become Argentine citizens. Although the details of the new provision have not been spelled out, on its face it is a violation of the United States-Argentine Treaty of 1854, which says that citizens of the two countries shall have the liberty "to enter into the same and remain and reside in any part thereof."

The restriction would affect between 3000 and 4000 American citizens now in Argentina as well as some 30,000 British subjects. Although many of these are for practical purposes permanent residents of Argentina, they have retained their foreign citizenship in the expectation of returning home. In large part they serve foreign interests in Argentina—as representatives of commercial firms and as correspondents for the newspaper press. Obviously it would place such institutions at a severe disadvantage if their representatives were arbitrarily compelled to forfeit their citizenship in order to work in Argentina. We hope the State Department will register an energetic protest over this prospective breach of good faith.

What makes the restriction self-defeating is its probable effect on the Argentine economy. If Americans cannot retain their citizenship while representing American firms in Argentina, then in all likelihood some of those firms will forgo their dealings with Peron altogether. Moreover, such a narrow ruling is an extremely poor inducement for the additional foreign capital which Peron has been soliciting. But it is perhaps too much to expect logic from dictators of Peron's stripe.

THE LANTERN

My neighbor down his barn-yard lane,
From supper-table once again
To close a gate, to milk a cow,
Walks with a dusk-lit lantern now.

His light along the meadow glows.
I see it twinkle as he goes
Among the fireflies, faint and far,
A candle-beam, and earth-bound star.

Indonesian Trusteeship

The advertisement from the Haagsche Post, The Hague, "Indonesian Debacle" published in the January 7 Washington Post is a masterpiece of innuendo. The key assumption is of course, a generalization: "the forms of Western rule when practiced by Eastern men quickly break down and anarchy takes their place. This anarchy is in turn a forcing ground for communism which thrives on a combination of Utopian propaganda and terrorism."

This is full of terms that mean many things to many people. The forms of Western rule when practiced by Filipinos have not broken down, principally because they were practices under tutelage of the colonial power, the United States, for 50 years, before they came to fruition, and the United States was anxious that they succeed.

The forms of Western rule when practiced by the Japanese did not break down. On the other hand, they became highly effective as a weapon against the West in the hands of power-greedy men. They came into the hands of these men because fundamental economic trends, resulting from enormous overpopulation, were ignored by the West.

The Dutch have been in Java for 400 years. What is their record in preparing the people for ultimate independence? What practices have they afforded the Javanese in the forms of Western rule? Had they been successful, the impact of Japanese occupation would have been far less profound. Had they been successful, the good offices of the United Nations and the resulting truce would not have resulted in the communities becoming derelict, "incapable of supporting their population economically, or else drift into new colonial dependence within the Russian sphere."

The answer seems to be clear. If the Dutch are unwilling or unable to tutor their colonial wards in the art of independence so as to prevent them from falling into communism, then both the Truman policy and the Atlantic Charter should be evoked to transfer that tutelage to other hands. Machinery exists within the United Nations for such a transfer. Trusteeships for Indonesia and for Indo-China under the United Nations seem to be the logical solution.

"Bevin's Blockbuster"

You ask in your excellent editorial of January 10, "Bevin's Blockbuster," what the British were up to when they rushed in to defend Egypt just as the Egyptians were getting ready to talk peace with the Israelis.

I saw one answer in a paragraph of an article entitled, "Britain still clings to its Lord Crumpets," in your issue of January 9. The writer, a British novelist named Giles Playfair, comes to the conclusion that Britain's social revolution will be delayed indefinitely because of a national make-believe attitude. He says:

"Here is the key to the riddle—the pretense is a part of a futile national attempt to prove that Britain still exists as it did before the war. The British people are engaged in a determined, if subconscious, effort to live in their past."

And the writer might well have added that Ernie Bevin has projected this pretense into his conduct of foreign affairs.

Foreign Relations Split

There seems to be much fuss over the changing of the ratio of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. It appears to me unwarranted.

When the Republican-controlled Eightieth Congress was organized there were 51 Republican Senators and 45 Democrats. If the 13 places on the Foreign Relations Committee had been divided proportionally the Republicans would have gotten 6.9 places and the Democrats 6.1. The seven to six division was logical.

In the Eighty-first Congress there are 54 Democrats and 42 Republicans. A proportionate division would give 7.3 places to the Democrats and 5.7 to the Republicans. Historically, the majority party has generally given the fractional seat on important committees to a member of their party even though the fraction was less than half. This is logical. Otherwise, the minority party would have more votes in the committee in proportion to the floor strength than the majority party. And the majority party is responsible for the legislation coming through the committee to the floor of the Senate.

Health Insurance

Only two segments of the population now can afford the luxury of being treated when sick. These are the very poor, who by virtue of their poverty are on the list of various welfare agencies, and the small minority of the population who, by virtue of their wealth, can reserve a room in a modern hospital and be treated by good physicians.

The third group, whose income ranges from $2000 to $5000, is the most unfortunate. Its savings, if any, are quickly depleted, borrowing ensues and tragedy follows. These people simply cannot afford the expense involved in physicians' fees, X-rays and other laboratory work need for a correct diagnosis. These people cannot afford to avail themselves of the modern methods of medical treatment. As a result, the sickness becomes chronic.

The proposed national health insurance plan is nothing else but a prepaid arrangement whereby every man, woman or child can be protected from cradle to grave in the event of sickness, just as our homes and our household furniture are now protected from fire in the event of loss. Wherein lies the evil of socialism in this very vital measure? HERMAN MORTON.

U. N. Observers For Palestine

I respectfully submit that the steps most urgently needed to prevent further large-scale fighting in Palestine are the following:

1. The immediate dispatch of an adequate number of U. N. observers to the area between the Dead Sea and the Gulf of Aqaba, there to be permanently stationed both on the Trans-Jordan and the Israeli sides of the border.

2. The request by the United States Government, on the one hand, and by the Security Council, on the other, of formal and public assurances from the British government that no British forces will be used in "repelling the invasion of Trans-Jordan by Israelis" unless and until the fact of such invasion has been publicly confirmed by the U. N. observers.

The reason why the above steps appear to be the most important requirements of the moment is that, ever since early September, 1947, the British government has made clear that, while the Jewish state as a whole was unpalatable to it and its liquidation if conditions were propitious would be welcomed, British control over the Negev has been the principal objective of Britain in the Palestine controversy.

Throughout the past year, this objective has remained unaltered. Only the methods of achieving it have changed from time to time. In October, 1947, and in July, 1948, the British hoped to obtain voluntary Jewish renunciation of the Negev through the discreet influence of the United States. In September, 1948, Britain expected, to gain the same end by means of a United Nations resolution.

For a time, Britain hoped that Trans-Jordanian military prowess would wrest the Negev from Israel—a contingency quite satisfactory to Great Britain, since Trans-Jordan is controlled by Britain in all but name. In recent months, Britain was prepared to see Egypt get all or part of the Negev on the assumption that the Egyptians would acquiesce in the military control and economic exploitation of the area by the British.

None of these stratagems worked. Only a few days ago, Britain, hinting at its readiness to come to the aid of Egypt under a defunct treaty, was rebuffed by the Egyptians, who made it clear that, after having tried for decades to get rid of British troops, they would not like to see them return. The logic of events makes it more than probable that the next attempt by Britain to secure for herself the control of the Negev will come by way of invading that area in the course of repelling an Israeli attack on Trans-Jordan somewhere between Aqaba and the Dead Sea.

Since an incident of that kind would provide the only foreseeable excuse for British invasion of the Negev, the temptation to announce to the world that the incident has occurred, or to provoke such an incident by sending Trans-Jordanian forces across the border and engaging Israeli troops in the course of any counterattack on their part, might be too great. The recent reports of British land and air reinforcements sent to Trans-Jordan lend further credence to this fear.

In view of the British tendency to state facts and interpret her rights and duties on the basis of unilateral findings, and haughtily to dismiss any challenge to the accuracy of the British position (the continued detention of Jewish refugees of military age on Cyprus allegedly on the ground that the United Nations Security Council and mediator have sanctioned such detention, in brazen disregard of the true state of facts, is a good example of this tendency), it would be far too dangerous to rely on British information services as the sole source of news regarding that area.

Surely, if Britain does not wish to resort to the means suggested above in order to gain control of the Negev, she can have no objection to the stationing of U. N. observers in the area and to giving binding assurances that no action will be taken by Britain except on the basis of those observers' findings. And surely, the Government of the United States could take no action more correct in substance and in form than to ask for the sending of such observers and for corresponding assurances from Great Britain.

Washington Calling

Attacks On Forrestal

JAMES FORRESTAL, Secretary of National Defense, is acutely aware of his big business-high finance background. In depressed moods he says that perhaps there is no place for the Wall Street man in Government, since the public seems to find it hard to believe a businessman can divorce himself from his private interests.

For several months now Forrestal has been under attack as the spokesman for a business-finance clique said to be seeking to restore the old cartel capitalism in Germany's Ruhr industry. Talking with the frankness that is one of his characteristics, Forrestal has frequently said that he can understand why there should be suspicion of such a clique.

He is one of three or four former officers of the investment firm of Dillon, Read & Co. to hold important policy making positions. In his own department, William H. Draper, jr., Undersecretary of Army, was vice president of Dillon, Read. Forrestal was president of the firm from 1938 to 1940, when President Roosevelt named him Undersecretary of the Navy.

At the same time he insists he has had little influence on German policy. And when the charge of military domination is made, he points out that the State Department, under James F. Byrnes, declined to take responsibility for administering occupied Germany.

ANOTHER charge brought against the Secretary of Defense is that he was disloyal and did not work for President Truman's reelection. He has said that he specifically asked the President if he should make speeches and was told no. His own concept was that in view of the troubled state of the world and the need for two-party cooperation, both State and Defense should be beyond active partisanship.

Given the trend of the past two years with mounting tension between the USA and the USSR, any man in Forrestal's job, regardless of background, would have been the target of brickbats. Certainly that is true if he had advocated, as Forrestal has done, the urgent necessity to strengthen American arms against Soviet aggression.

How much he had to do with making this policy no one on the outside can say with accuracy. But it is important to remember that the new Secretary of State, Dean Acheson, first initiated the Marshall Plan, so bitterly opposed by Russia, and Acheson first came directly under Russian attack at the outset of the cold war.

Part of the attack on Forrestal originates in the deep desire of the American people for peace and their equally deep distrust of what is lumped under the word "militarization." In the beginning at least part of it was Communist-inspired.

Another reason Forrestal is the focus of controversy is that he is the first Secretary of Defense in the transition period when Navy, Air and Army are supposedly being merged under a common direction. Forrestal has frequently expressed the point of view that this cannot be done overnight by knocking peoples' heads together. He argues that the process is necessarily gradual and evolutionary.

The Secretary of Defense has been criticized for not cracking down harder on those in and out of uniform who have defied his orders forbidding lobbying. Vice Admiral Arthur W. Radford, vice Chief of Naval Operations and regarded by many as the Navy's No. 1 man, has fought in season and out for the Navy's air arm in spite of all restrictions. Secretary for Air Stuart Symington advocated 70 air groups, although Forrestal had earlier come out for a smaller air force in a balanced land, sea and air program. Symington says he had cleared this with his chief.

ONE OF Forrestal's deep convictions and something he has advocated over and over is Cabinet coordination. This has created suspicion within the Cabinet that he wanted to be coordinator and whipcracker.

The men around him complain that he himself is a poor administrator. Several of the men brought into the Defense Department are friends, who, like Forrestal, are very wealthy. Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney, Assistant Secretary of the Air Force, and John Nicholas Brown, Assistant Secretary of Navy, are both multimillionaires. Symington is also wealthy.

As the Truman Administration moves nearer to a farmer-labor concept of Government, the Defense Department and those who now man it will seem increasingly anomalous. That may be one reason Forrestal talks restively of his nine years in Government and of the fact that a man grows stale in office. Yet as Washington observed in the war years and afterward, rich New Yorkers given a taste of power and responsibility seem reluctant to go back to that brokerage office and the swimming pool on Long Island.

Steel Capacity

A Communication

AS ONE of the "statisticians who delight in projecting consumption trends that demonstrate the need of greatly increased capacity," I would like to comment on your editorial ot December 27 on "Increased Steel Capacity" and on Mr. Van Zandt's communication on the same subject that appeared in your issue January 1.

Your editorial and Van Zandt's letter are both in line with statements made by spokesmen for the steel industry during the past several years, before and after the war. Again we are told that the steel industry is operating at a high level but fears present demand is abnormal and will not hold up, and that an immediate increase in capacity would divert steel from satisfying current demand.

Mr. Van Zandt also suggests that it is much better to build new capacity during dull times rather than during boom times, but he does not point out that that is exactly what the steel industry did not do in the six years before 1940.

I want to call attention particularly to two of several unsubstantiated statements made by Van Zandt that will serve also as comment on the position of your editorial: (1) "Today, as in past eras of great industrial activity, the steel industry is under pressure to increase its capacity beyond the normal rate of increase" (my italics), and (2) "It cannot be wise to anticipate the normal demand of future years in order to overgorge ourselves on today's prosperity—a prosperity that will not always be with us."

As I read the record, the pressure is to get capacity up in line with the longtime rate of per capita requirements for prosperity years, and current consumption cannot be described as "overgorging." In fact the shortage in steel is a factor in the high cost of living and in the tapering off in consumer demand that your editorials and the steel industry spokesmen point to.

THE FACT that present steel consumption cannot be described as overgorging is clearly indicated by the upward trend in per capita production. The normal rate of steel consumption per capita (domestic use and exports) in relatively prosperous years has risen from abcut 650 pounds in 1910 to 950 pounds in 1920, then to 1000 pounds in 1930 and to nearly 1200 in 1940.

A projection of this increasing per capita demand calls for about 1350 pounds per capita for 1949-50, or about two thirds of a ton per person. Now that we have a total population of nearly 150 million persons, this per capita figure calls for a total production of something over 100 million tons.

Even if the industry were to continue operating at 100 per cent of the present record capacity continuously, it could not quite supply the "normal" per capita requirement. As a matter of fact, spokesmen for the steel industry argue that normally the industry operates at 75 to 80 per cent of capacity, and not for long at 100 per cent—as at present. The arithmetic of production and capacity is simple. If we need 100 to 105 million tons of production and the industry operates at, say, 90 per cent of capacity, capacity has to be about 110 to 115 million tons.

THE RECORD of steel capacity reveals the fact, not generally recognized, that if it had not been for the depression of the 1930s, the steel industry undoubtedly would have had at least 10 per cent more capacity by 1940 upon which to build its wartime expansion. And, if expansion from 1934 on had proceeded at the normal rate of 2 million tons per year (as in the period 1910 to 1934), we would now have a capacity of at least 110 millions tons, and by the end of 1950, about 115. In contrast with this figure, the industry plans as announced this week will provide a capacity of 98 million tons by the end of 1950.

But if the industry spokesmen are correct in their stated conviction that they will inevitably return to operating at only 75 to 80 per cent of capacity, it means returning to a condition of unemployment similar to what we still had in 1936. In that case, if we read The Washington Post editorial correctly, there will be no sense in expanding capacity in the face of temporary slack demand.

Looking backward, it is clear that the prolonged depression of the 1930s is the real origin of the present shortage of about 10 million tons of steel, and looking forward, it is clear that capacity for the early 1950s should be 115 to 120 million tons for prosperity conditions (with the steel industry operating at about 90 per cent of capacity).

If current fears of an impending decline in demand again restrain expansion, the steel shortage or the prosperity requirements of the 1950s will be greater than at present. It would then become either an obstacle to job opportunities or a powerful contributor to inflation and the high cost of industrial production—as it has been in the past two years.

LOUIS H. BEAN,
Office of the Secretary of Agriculture.

Editor's Note: The Washington Post, in an editorial subsequent to the one to which Mr. Bean refers, agrees with President Truman that there should be an immediate study of the adequacy of production facilities for critically short materials, including steel. We said: "Provided congressional investigations into the adequacy of production facilities are conducted by legislators eager to acquire all relevant information instead of to find support for preconceived views, such inquiries would serve a useful purpose."

Truman Says He'll Back Hawaii for Statehood

Hawaii's new drive for statehood was off to a fast start yesterday.

President Truman personally assured Hawaian Delegate Joseph R. Farrington of his intention to see statehood through. He gave the same assurance to George McLane, director, and former Nebraska Senator Edward R. Burke, legal counsel, of the statehood commission office here.

Representative Andrew L. Somers (D., N. Y.), slated for the House Public Lands Committee chairmanship, said that "both the Hawaiian anl Alaskan statehood bills have top priority in my own mind."

Truman to Make No Cabinet Change Before Inaugural

President Truman said yesterday that there would be no changes in his Cabinet before Inauguration Day.

"How soon after the Inauguration may we expect some changes?" he was asked by a reporter.

Mr. Truman told the reporter to wait and see—that you never can tell.

Asked about the remarks of Secretary of Defense Forrestal, who said the other day that he expected to continue in the Cabinet, Mr. Truman said that the remarks were perfectly plain.

At D. C. Zoo

Cafeteria Will Replace Restaurant

The cherished hopes of Superintendent William A. Mann to make the Zoological Park restaurant into a gourmet's paradise received a sharp, and perhaps permanent setback yesterday.

In February, the restaurant will re-open as a cafeteria, complete with stainless steel counters, sandwich blocks, metal trays and without the epicurean atmosphere so close to Dr. Mann's heart.

Decision to switch to a safeteria was made by Gordon Leech, the concessionaire who runs the Zoo's eating facilities, and who hopes thereby to serve more people at lower prices.

The Anteaters' Club and the Explorers Club, gourmets all, regularly meet at the Zoo restaurant to sample venison, breast of pheasant sous cloche and other delicacies.

But as far as the gourmets are concerned, Leech said, the cafeteria will still have the same cooking facilities and the same chef. On a limited scale, the cafeteria will still try to cater to the Anteaters and Explorers, he said.

Dr. Mann described European zoo restaurants yesterday with nostalgia and disappointment. "In Europe a zoo is like a club," he said, "they always have the best restaurants in town."

The new cafeteria will seat 140 persons at a time. Prices will be cheaper, for there will be no tipping, no waiters to pay, no linen costs, and a faster turnover, Leech said.

Court Orders Man to Pay Up —In Cash or Frogs

Redruth, England, Jan. 15 (AP).—The court told Albert Shortman today he'd have to pay up—either in frogs or cash.

Shortman bought a motorcycle and sidecar from a fellow villager for 15 pounds ($60). The payment was to have been either in pounds or frogs—which bring a pound a hundred from medical researchers.

Thus far, said the fellow villager, Shortman had only come across with 88 frogs.

Judge Scobell Armstrong ordered Shortman to deliver the cash or the rest of the frogs, but said of frogs as currency:

"I should think no more inconvenient currency could have been found, since it is a form with great mobility apt to disappear with even greater rapidity than pound notes."

D. C. Loan Law Urged Instead Of Regulations

Proposed regulation of money lenders' operations in the District is based on "questionable authority" from Congress, and laws covering the matter should be enacted instead, two attorneys urged yesterday.

Al Philip Kane, attorney and member of the Washington Board of Trade's law and legislation committee, said the regulations, if adopted, "will result in years of protracted litigation" and a clear-cut law would therefore be preferable.

William R. Lichtenberg, attorney for the Washington Association of Finance Companies, told a public hearing on the proposed rules that a new law raising interest rates to 3 per cent a month on the unpaid balances of loans up to $750 "would encourage" loan firms to remain in the District.

But he hinted that if the proposed regulations are approved, loan firms may move across the District border to Maryland and Virginia and thus cost the District tax and license fee revenues.

The hearing, final one in a series on the regulations, was conducted by Assistant Corporation Counsel Chester H. Gray.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph Alsop

The Dutch Uncle

PARIS—For any American in his senses it is brusquely sobering to discover the powerful influence of Washington on the internal politics — we at home would consider the private affairs—of the nations of western Europe. A year and a half ago only American financial aid saved most western European nations from succumbing to dictatorships either of the left or of the right. But this phenomenon has now developed into something much more complex and in some ways alarming.

Here in France, for instance, the basic law of the European Recovery Program has the effect of pushing the Paris ERP administrator, David Bruce, into the center of the whirling maelstrom of French politics.

Very crudely speaking, the grand political contest in France is now between the men of the center—the members of the Socialist, Radical and MRP Parties—and Gen. Charles de Gaulle and his followers. The Communists were the menace that first caused Frenchmen to rally to De Gaulle.

Their present role is to help De Gaulle by such attacks on the French economy as the recent coal strike. The demand for De Gaulle, the strong man, always grows louder when political or financial instability increases, and subsides proportionately when the outlook improves.

IT IS something of a miracle that the French center has survived thus far, through the long succession of Ramadier, Schuman, Reynaud and Queuille cabinets. Nonetheless, it has survived. And since the passage of Prime Minister Queuille's rather precariously balanced budget, most wiseacres even give the center at least a chance to survive in the future.

Survival of the center is difficult for two reasons. Certain issues, such as the radicals' deep disagreement with the Socialists about state planning, deeply divide the center parties. And with a few such eminent exceptions as Foreign Minister Robert Schuman and the President of the Republic, Vincent Auriol, the center lacks big men. Survival has been possible only because Marshall aid has eased the situation here, and because the old Socialist, Auriol, is a political master hand.

Auriol's part, in effect, has been that of the wise old leader of a herd of cattle on the range. Whenever the wolves of the right and left come dangerously close, as they do in every governmental crisis, Auriol gives the warning call. Then the whole herd forms up in a circle with their horns outward; the crisis is somehow surmounted, and a new centrist government is formed. The center strategy is to continue to repeat this maneuver indefinitely, if possible, until better times weaken the extremist groupings of left and right.

THE AMERICAN role in this process arises inevitably from the conditions Congress attached to the European Recovery Program. For every dollar of Marshall aid, the French government is first required to sterilize an equivalent sum in francs in what is known as the counterpart fund. Second, the French government is forbidden to draw upon this fund, which will amount next year to more than 250 billion francs, unless the government is following "noninflationary" fiscal policies.

The traditions of French government finance have never been especially puritanical. The tendency therefore has always been to put off all such unpleasant actions as imposing new taxes and dismissing surplus bureaucrats, until disaster actually threatened. Now, however, when disaster begins to loom, the first step is to go to David Bruce and ask for a few billions from the counterpart to ease the situation. Being strictly restrained by congressional injunction, Bruce must then reply that he cannot release the billions until the causes of the threatened disaster have been removed.

THIS DRAMA was played before Prime Minister Queuille offered his vitally important fiscal and budgetary reform program to the French Chamber last month. Furthermore, Queuille actually sought the votes of certain leading deputies by informing them that unless the French budget were thus balanced, further release of counterpart funds would not be approved by Bruce.

The argument was powerful, since the French government now relies entirely upon the counterpart fund to finance its program of internal investment and economic improvement. But the inevitable effect is to place Bruce in the position of a sort of Dutch uncle, sitting on the cash box and insisting that nothing would move him except a balanced French budget. What was done in the days of Poincare with no thought in mind except the vital interests of France is now done with a misleading implication of American pressure.

Thus "American interference" is grumbled against in many circles, while the Gaullists even make the extraordinary demand that all releases of counterpart funds should be stopped, in order to precipitate a final crisis and force a French election.

It is remarkable that, having been placed in this extraordinary delicate position, David Bruce has managed to retain the respect and win the liking of all groups except the Communist diehards. But the fact that Bruce is doing a difficult job with superlative tact does not diminish the American responsibility. Nor does it simplify the problem posed by this new role which the United States cannot for a time escape from playing in European politics.

Bill Asks Change In D. C. Rent Law

The District's separate rent control law would be eliminated and Washington would come under the same provisions as the national act under a bill filed by Senator Francis J. Myers (D., Pa.) yesterday to extend and tighten the present National Housing and Rent Act.

The District, which has had separate rent control from the rest of the Nation since 1942, "for the first time would be covered into the national law and uniform standards would thus be set up, particularly as regards the so-called cooperatives racket," said Senator Myers.

Meanwhile, Rent Control Administrator Robert F. Cogswell yesterday wrote the District Commissioners, urging them to ask Congress to make the provisions on cooperative apartments in the present national act apply to the District.

Cooperative Practice

These provisions attempt to regulate a practice which has been increasing in the District, that is transferring apartment houses to cooperative organizations. The organization then sells apartment units to individual cooperative owners, who may evict the tennants occupying the units.

The present national act's provisions in this regard outlaw such evictions unless at least 65 per cent of the tenants of a building buy cooperative units. Cogswell made it clear that he limited his recommendation to these provisions, which he believes should be applied in the District.

Rent Control At Wartime Status

Senator Myers' bill would restore rent control almost to the wartime status, with recontrol of all housing in defense rental areas except transients' hotel rooms and tourist homes, motor courts, trailers and trailer spaces.

Rent control would be restored to permanent hotel accommodations, including apartment hotels, to new construction, conversions and to property that was previously owner-occupied.

No 15 per cent voluntary rent increases would be permitted in new leases, as allowed by the present National act, but those leases already in effect would continue.

Senator Burnet R. Maybank (D., S. C.), chairman of the Senate Banking Committee, said the bill might become the Administration's rent control measure. Rent legislation will get top priority, he predicted.

The present law, passed over President Truman's protest by the Republican Eightieth Congress, has allowed property owners to "get out from under rent control and to charge their tenants whatever the traffic can bear," while most landlords are still subject to controls, Senator Myers said.

Criminal Action Power

Under the Myers bill, which would extend rent control from April 1, 1949, to June 30, 1951, authority to regulate evictions would be returned to the Federal Government. Power of criminal action would be restored to the Housing Expediter, which also would regain the right to sue for triple damages.

Both tenants and landlords would have the right to appeal from regulations and decisions of the Housing Expediter to the Emergency Court of Appeals.

The act would make clear that the powers of the local boards are purely advisory, and the expediter would be required to state reasons for approving or rejecting the boards' recommendations.

Senator Myers' bill also would set up a national advisory committee of 15 members representing landlords, tenants and the general public to work with the expediter.

Rollbacks of rents might be possible in some cases under the new-construction controls which the act would reimpose, Senator Myers' office said.

If the rent for such new construction were higher than for comparable dwellings in the area, the expediter could order a rent reduction in setting the ceiling, it was explained.

Eklund Case Witness Held In Drug Theft

A drug addict who helped convict Washington's "sniper" slayer, John E. Eklund, in 1942, yesterday was held for the grand jury in the theft of $2000 worth of narcotics from a drug store.

Marvin Richard Harlow, 43, who police claim to have linked previously with 28 drugstore thefts, was held by United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence under $2500 bonds, on charges of housebreaking and larceny.

Police said Harlow admitted breaking into the drug store at 12 Kennedy st. nw. Sunday after drugs were found secreted in his clothes and in his furnished room.

Harlow was arrested by FBI agents Wednesday evening for violation of parole from Milan (Mich.) Correctional Institution, a Federal hospital for narcotic addicts, then turned over to Washington police for investigation.

Harlow testified during Eklund's trial that while the two played chess through the bars of Eklund's cell, Eklund, a former George Washington University student, made damaging admissions. Harlow told a District Court jury Eklund confessed to killing Hyland G. McClaine, 17, last of a series of mysterious "sniper" slayings, and revealed where he had buried his gun. Eklund is serving a 15-year to life term.

Russian Academy Of Science Expels 3 Western Experts

Moscow, Jan. 13 (U.P.).—The Academy of Sciences, meeting in Leningrad, today expelled three western scientists who did not agree with Russian policies in the field of genetics.

They were Sir Henry Dale of Britain, and Prof. Herman Muller of Indiana University, who previously resigned their memberships, and Olaf Brok, a Norwegian philologist.

Both Dale and Muller alleged that Russia was suppressing scientific opposition to T. D. Lysenko whose theories of the supreme effect of environment on heredity are not generally accepted in the west.

Californian, 33, Ends Life With Rifle in YMCA

A 33-year-old man, identified by police as Virgil M. Valdez of Bakersfield, Calif., was found dead in a fourth-floor room of the YMCA, 1736 G st. nw., yesterday after he had shot himself through the head with a hunting rifle.

The body, clad in pajamas, was found in a half-sitting position, by a maid who came to the room about 10 a. m. The rifle was found along the bed with the muzzle wrapped in a pillow. One shot had been fired.

Police said a note left by Valdez, addressed to a person in Bakersfield, indicated he "was tired of living." He had registered at the YMCA on January 10. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of suicide.

Judge Laments Lack of Respect For Bench Today

Fall River, Mass., Jan. 13 (AP).—A Superior Court justice complained from the bench today that "no one seems to care what the judge says."

Judge Joseph E. Warner of Taunton, presiding at a civil session of Superior Court here, was told when a case was called that an attorney was unable to appear becuse he was building a house.

"Now I've heard everything," Judge Warner said. "I go to Barnstable and they tell me the lawyers are out fishing. I go to Springfield and they tell me the lawyers are out golfing. And I come here and they tell me they're out building houses."

Then he shook his head and added:

"I don't know what's the matter with the lawyers of today. When I was practicing, every attorney was afraid of the judge. When a judge issued a command or a request, we jumped to do his bidding. I don't know, but today no one seems to care what the judge says."

Doctors at Gallinger Hospital where Highsmith was taken for treatment said the fainting spell was due to epileptic convulsions. Police officials explained that disability not incurred in the line of duty is grounds for the charges.

America's Largest Concentration of Aged and Ageing Whiskies Now in Kinsey Warehouses

LINFIELD, PA. — Nestled in the rolling hills of this quiet country community is a collection of attractive buildings which house not only the famous Kinsey distillery, but 16 warehouses that contain the largest concentration in America of aged and ageing whiskies.

To realize the full importance of these reserves, it is necessary to go back to the war years, during which the alcohol output of distillers was used in the national all-out war effort. There were, however, two brief "holidays" during the months of [illegible] 1944 and January 1945, when distillers were permitted to use alcohol for making whiskey. Distillers had adequate stocks for making plenty, but were forced to limit production because of lack of capacity; other distillers had plenty of storage but could not produce sufficient whiskey for future needs.

Kinsey was one of the two major distillers which had both high production facilities and enough storage space to accommodate all the whiskey distilled during the "holidays." That is why today, when many distillers are short of mature whiskies, Kinsey has vast reserves of excellent aged whiskey to draw upon, and why every drop in every bottle of Kinsey has years

Steaks, Choice Beef Will Be Plentiful

Choice beef steaks and roasts will be more plentiful the rest of the winter and the coming spring than last year.

This was indicated by an Agriculture Department report yesterday that livestock farmers have a record number of cattle being fattened on grain and other concentrated feeds for the slaughter market. In general, cattle fattened on grain make better quality beef than those fed on grass.

But the supply of medium and lower quality beef is expected to be smaller than last year. This is because marketings of cattle fed on pastures and ranges will be less.

The total cattle population has been declining for several years from record wartime peaks.

Officials said beef prices in the months ahead could be expected to average higher than a year ago because more of the supply will be of the higher priced, better quality meat.

The 1949 supply of all meats is expected to be about the same as last year. But prospects point to smaller total supplies of beef, veal, lamb and mutton, but more pork.

The number of cattle on feed January 1 for slaughter was reported at 4,548,000 head—the largest since the Department started keeping records in 1929. The number on feed a year ago was 3,821,000. The previous record was 4,445,000 on January 1, 1943.

The biggest increase was in the Midwestern corn belt, where, of course, are the largest supplies of feed.

Retailers Briefed

Deflation Stop-Gaps Outlined

New York, Jan. 13 (AP).—A. W. Zelomek, New York economist, told retailers today how they can make money despite growing deflation.

"You will succeed only by running your store better than your competitors," said Zelomek.

"I believe that a deflationary trend has already begun. At the moment, at least, it seems likely to me that it will pick up downward momentum in the second half of the year."

Zelomek, economist of the International Statistical Bureau, spoke on the closing day of the thirty-eighth annual convention of the National Retail Dry Goods Association.

Zelomek summarized the general situation affecting retailers:

"A downward adjustment in prices is overdue, and it will probably be accompanied by some decline in sales and some increase in unemployment.

"There are no reasons yet apparent for believing, however, that what is developing will be a depression of major importance.

Zelomek estimated a decline of 4 to 5 per cent in public income this year with the largest part of the loss in the second half.

Legal Jargon In Policies Hit By Md. Court

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 13 (AP).—Ambiguous legal jargon in fine print on auto insurance policies must be construed "against the insurance company and in favor of the insured," the Maryland Court of Appeals ruled today.

The court rejected the argument of the Public Service Mutual Insurance Company that a policy holder notified the wrong man of an auto accident.

The company said one of its 'subagents," not authorized to accept claims, was told of the crash, but the home office in Baltimore did not learn of it until 45 days later.

Judge Stephen R. Collins, in the high court's opinion, said the company must pay, under a liability policy it sold to James Edward Hankins, Negro, of Brooklyn, Md.

Hankins' son, James, jr., then 23, was involved in an accident while driving his father's car on August 25, 1946. A damage suit was filed in 1947 for a seven-year-old boy injured in the crash.

Hankins, jr., said he immediately notified H. O. Webster, the company's subagent at Linthicum Heights, Md., who had sold him the policy.

The standard liability policy contained this clause:

"Written notice shall be given," in case of accident, "to the company or any of its authorized agents as soon as practicable."

On the back were the words: "Important: Every accident, however slight, must immediately be reported to the home office of the company."

The court reversed an opinion of Judge James Clark, who last May 6 ruled in Anne Arundel County Circuit Court that the firm would not have to pay.

On the Town

By Robert P. Jordan
Post Reporter

Soft lights, a tinkling piano, the best of brandies and wines—and modishly garbed "singing models" to charm the clientele.

This is the theme of the new Salle de Champagne, which opens tonight on the site of the late Club Cairo (Cairo Hotel) and, from all indications, bids fair to become one of the town's most intimate spots. Picture this:

"Pink twilight lighting" (kind to milady's complexion, reminds the management) setting off an "elegant drawing room atmosphere." In and out of this dreamlike scene, says the management, will stroll a bevy of eye-catching "singing models"—who, between songs, will serve the trade from a cuisine featuring "many unusual luxuries." (No mere waitresses these.)

Pertinent intelligence: the refined palate will find "many kinds of fine cheeses, unobtainable elsewhere," in the cuisine. No palate, refined or otherwise, will endure whiskey, gin or beer at the Salle de Champagne. It's not on sale. Wines and brandies—only these and nothing more—are available.

There's another opening tonight, this one calculated to please students of the dance—a la chorus line.

The Crossroads, dine and dance nightery at the Peace Cross in Bladensburg, hopes to have customers hanging from the rafters to ogle the Holiday Girls, a five-member chorus of beauties coming from New York.

Besides the five dancers, owner Al Smith advises music will be furnished by Ralph Hawkins and his band, with Sherry Sherwood doing the vocals. Emcee Joe E. Ross will supply the laughs. "It's a new policy," announces Smith.

The Hamilton Hotel's Rainbow Room is back on a nightly, except-Sunday, dancing basis, with tunes furnished by Paul Kain. After months of week-end dancing, the room reopened on a full-time basis last night.

VA Employment Frozen as Prelude To Cut of 10,000

VETERANS ADMINISTRATION has frozen its emloyment at present levels in preparing to wipe out 10,000 jobs by next June 30. About 800 of those positions are in this city.

"This won't mean 10,000 employes will be discharged," a spokesman said. "many of the positions are now vacant and others will be vacant before June 30." He suggested that most of the cutback could be brought about by normal turnover and through the process of abolishing vacant jobs.

The personnel freeze is a tip-off that VA won't appeal to Congress for more money than was recommended by the President in his budget. The President asked Congress last week to give VA $1,300,000,000 less than it has for the present fiscal year. Several members of Congress have indicated they will try to get VA additional funds.

Under the President's budget, VA would have funds for 12,348 employes in this city after June 30. It now has money for an average of 13,162 in this fiscal year.

In the field service, VA now has about 183,155 employes. Its 1950 budget would provide for an average of 173,941, or about 9200 less.

A year ago, however, the President's budget also called for a slash of 10,000 VA jobs but it never took place. Actually, Congress overruled the Administration on the slash.

First, members of Congress tried to get either VA or the Budget Bureau to officially ask for the money to prevent any layofff. When that failed, Congress independently gave VA the money to retain most of its employes.

SENATOR McCLELLAN has induced a bill to raise the travel allowance of officials and employes who travel on official business from $6 to $10 a day. He's chairman of the Expenditures Committee which will consider the legislation.

Meantime, the Budget Bureau is having a survey made by the Bureau of Labor Statistics on actual travel costs. A preliminary survey indicates the cost will be well over $9 a day. In other words, people who are ordered to travel must spend about $3 a day of their own money.

DILLON S. MYER will be appointed the commissioner of Indian Affairs. He has been asked to take the position and he has accepted it. However, he first wants to clean up his assignment in the State Department. He should be tops for that job.

REVENUE: Ninety employes from 10 agencies will go to school next week at Internal Revenue to learn the do's and don'ts of income taxes. These employes, in turn, will advise colleagues in their agencies on how to make out their tax returns.

RETIREMENT: The National Association of Civil Retired Employes has drafted a law to give retired Federal workers a better break. Its bill will be introduced soon in both the House and the Senate. It will provide:

That employes who retired before April 1 of last year be allowed to recompute their pensions under the present system. This provision would be a big help to those who had more than 35 years of service, and,

That employes who retired before that date be given a flat increase of 25 per cent in their annuities as well as joint suvivorship to protect their widows. The law limits them to one of these benefits.

The association also is mapping out a second bill which will tie annuities to Federal salaries. It believes Congress should raise pensions every time it raises salaries.

DCE'S: A Displaced Career Employes Association is being organized by a group of DCE's. No dues or assessments. Get details of the organization from Clifford L. Franks, 3707 14th ave., Cottage City, Md.

INTERNES: Twenty-six Federal workers from a dozen agencies have been selected by Civil Service for the new intern program to start early next month. They will be given special instruction and be assigned to various agencies during their five-month training period. Those selected are:

Irwin V. Czeskleba and Joseph C. Redmond, Agriculture; DeCosta V. Mason and Nora Saba, Army; Saga Baker, John Henry, Alfred Lorenz, and Gerry Pettibone, Commerce; Samuel Cohen, Sam Hunter, and Robert Wyckoff, General Accounting; Jean B. Goodwyn, and Charles S. Spalding, Library of Congress; Michael Perna and Varnes J. Stringer, Maritime; John D. Alexander, A. Earl Calahan, John Donohue, and Alice C. Fulton, Navy; Charles Bass, Charles Lawton, and Daniel Williamson, State; Ruth Myer, Civil Service; William O'liff, Federal Security; Philip Schmidt, Defense, and Nicholas A. Vitale, Treasury.

JPA: Upward of 3500 people who applied for the junior professional assistant exam will be given the test on Saturday, January 22. That date not only falls on Inauguration weekend, but it also comes in the midst of semester tests of colleges and universities. The test is aimed toward attracting college seniors to the Federal service.

Civil Service won't postpone the test. It explains that the exam is given about this time every year, and that preparations already have been made to give it the country-over a week from Saturday. However, next year it promises to hold it a bit earlier.

Senate Bill Introduced For Second Big Airport

Location Planned In Vicinity of D. C., Construction to Be Under CAA Agency

A bill to authorize construction of a second major civilian airport in this area was introduced in the Senate yesterday by Senator Edwin C. Johnson (D., Colo.).

The airport would supplement Washington National Airport, and would be constructed by direction of the Administrator of Civil Aeronautics and operated by CAA in the same manner as the present airport.

It would be "in or in the vicinity of the District of Columbia," under the proposed legislation, and large enough so that with National Airport it would be "adequate to meet the civil aviation needs, immediate and future, of the District of Columbia and surrounding area."

No Estimate of Cost

No estimate of construction cost was stated in the bill, which was referred to the Senate Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, of which Senator Johnson is chairman. There it will be considered by the Subcommittee on Aviation, with likelihood of early action.

Cost of constructing National Airport has been variously estimated between 12 and 16 million dollars, but much of the work was done by Federal agencies.

On December 26, The Washington Post disclosed that definite plans were under way for a second airport, with a top-level CAA committee studying possible sites. One of these sites is in the vicinity of Annandale, Va. CAA said yesterday that this site study is still continuing.

A. S. Koch, director of the CAA Office of Planning and Evaluation and chairman of the site committee, said last month that the proposed airport would be as close to Washington as possible, but physical considerations rule out such an airport in the District itself.

CAA said the bill which Senator Johnson introduced was "based on suggestions for legislation presented to his committee in September by a representative of CAA."

Long Been Proposed

A second major civilian airport has long been proposed here. Before National Airport was completed, in 1941, aviation authorities were warning that it would soon prove too limited to handle rapidly booming air traffic.

At present, in bad weather there are extensive delays and interruptions in air service when planes "stack up" to come in on National Airport's "range station" which also clears planes in for landings at Bolling Air Force Base and the Anacostia Naval Air Station.

Senator Johnson's bill would give the CAA Administrator authority to make all arrangements for establishing, protecting and maintaining the airport; to construct necessary streets, roads and highways approaching it; to lease such facilities as dining rooms, cafeterias, etc.

Police powers and criminal jurisdiction—which plagued National Airport for years during which it was a "no man's land" for crime jurisdiction—are set out in the bill.

The administrator would be empowered to appoint personnel who could carry firearms and make arrests for either misdemeanors, felonies or suspected felonies, while the officer in command could accept collateral from those arrested and deposit this with the United States commissioner.

In addition, the CAA administrator could make agreements with States or subdivisions for required municipal services. The bill makes no mention of a ban on segregation at airport facilities, but segregation undoubtedly would be outlawed in view of the recent segregation ban ordered by CAA Administrator D. W. Rentzel at National Airport.

Inaugural Group Faces Deficit on Ticket Tax

Committee Fails To Collect Levy; Loss Likely Unless Congress Steps In

By Richard Morris
Post Reporter

The 1949 Inaugural Committee will be faced with paying Federal tax on tickets to ceremonies for President Truman next week and may lose money as a result unless belated legislation is passed by Congress, it developed yesterday.

Chairman Robert L. Doughton (D., N. C.), of the House Ways and Means Committee, has introduced a resolution to exempt tickets to the inauguaral parade, the Gala, and the President's Ball from 20 per cent Federal taxes.

But the last of 44,000 tickets to the parade had been sold yesterday, tax free, along with thousands of ball and Gala tickets, some of which are still available.

Expects Bill to Pass

Melvin D. Hildreth, chairman of the Inaugural Committee, said he had been "assured" the bill would pass, according to precedent established in previous inaugurations.

Representative Wilbur D. Mills (D., Ark.), a member of the House committee, said it appears the Inaugural Committee "is out on the end of a limb because it has sold tickets without collecting the tax."

If the resolution should not pass, Mills said, the committee will probably "go in the hole" on its sale of tickets. Chairman Hildreth has announced that surplus receipts will go to charity, and he said last night it appears there will be "several thousand dollars" left over if the tickets remain tax free.

Mills said Representative Robert F. Rich (R., Pa.), has "served notice" he will block consideration of the bill on the House floor by unanimous consent.

Hearing Scheduled Today

The Ways and Means Committee has scheduled a hearing on the resolution for 10 a. m. today. To reach the House floor for prompt action under "suspension of the rules" procedure, the bill must be reported by the House Rules Committee. The Rules Committee, Mills pointed out, will not be chosen until Tuesday—two days before inauguration.

Chairman Doughton said last night he believes the bill "will pass," but Mills said it may well be after the Inauguration is over before it does.

Meanwhile, on the House floor, Washington hotels came under fire for charging "exorbitant rates" for rooms during Inaugural Week. Representative J. M. Combs (D., Tex.) hinted they may be inviting renewed rent controls.

Combs said he has received "numerous reports" that local hotels are "overcharging" for rooms during the period. To them, he propounded this question before the House:

"Are you trying to keep the people who elected President Truman from seeing him inaugurated, or shall we interpret your action as merely an invitation to the Congress to place hotel rates in Washington under rent control?"

Combs said he knew of one instance in which a friend was quoted a price for "two ordinary adjoining rooms" of $38 per room, $76 per day, with "a requirement of a minimum of three days' occupancy and an advance deposit of $200."

"I personally know that the price so quoted is at least four or five times the amount ordinarily charged," he said.

Combs said about 100 members of the House had spoken to him about similar reports.

He said there "may be some justification for charging higher rates under certain circumstances, but it must be explained to the people."

The hotels "are not going to chisel the people of this country," he added. "If they do, they are liable to force a bill in Congress for rent controls on their rooms."

Citizen Council Seeks to End Sousa Bridge Traffic Block

Immediate action to eliminate traffic congestion at Sousa Bridge and its approaches was sought last night by a special committee of the Southeast Council which met at the Eleventh Precinct Station House, Nichols ave. and Chicago st. se.

An appointment with the Commissioners will be sought by the committee, its chairman, Vernis Absher, president of the Southeast Citizens Association, said.

The committee is composed of one representative from each of the 13 member groups of the Southeast Council and is empowered to act without referring back to the council or its member bodies.

It will ask the Commissioners for a public hearing, Absher said.

"The people over here in Southeast are getting tired of the inaction of District heads over the situation at the bridge and Barney Circle," he declared.

Absher, a real estate dealer, said people are becoming hesitant to purchase property in the area because of the extreme difficulty encountered in traveling to and from the downtown business section.

The congestion at the bridge and its approaches was termed a "hazard," aggravated by the increase of vehicular traffic caused by population growths in the Southeast and adjoining Maryland areas in the protest letter prepared to be sent to the Commissioners.

"It is evident that the situation is primarily caused by the street-car-bus terminal which obstructs the free flow of traffic across the bridge," the letter said. It added the situation "not only causes hazards and delays but will result in the loss of property values" because of the "inconvenience to reach residences and places of business."

The only solution, it was contended, is the removal of the terminal from the west end of the bridge, providing a new off-street terminal and rearranging traffic channels. The Southeast Council and the Federation of Citizens already have made public such a plan.

The Congress Heights Citizens Association last night directed its public utilities committee to make a study of proposed bus route changes in Southeast Washington and to represent it at a Public Utilities Commission hearing

Police Say Arrest of Three Solved Hundreds of Thefts

Police recovered between $5000 and $6000 worth of small construction equipment and automobile accessories in two Virginia homes Wednesday night, arrested three youths, and claimed today to have solved hundreds of thefts.

The three were William Dodd, 20, of 2121 Military rd., Arlington; Harold Schweitzer, 20, RFD 1, Fairfax, and Walter J. Curtis, 19, Kirby rd., Fairfax. They were charged with grand larceny and released under $1000 bond.

Police said the loot had been taken from parked automobiles and from new construction jobs during the past several months. The three youths were plumbers' helpers, although each worked for a different contractor.

The stolen goods included plumbing tools, pipe fittings, wheels, rims, mirrors, hub caps, spotlights and tires, police said. The majority was recovered in the basement of Dodd's house, which had been under observation for several weeks, according to Arlington Detective Dudley Rector.

Dodd was arrested at 9:15 p. m. Wednesday, and implicated the other two, although their names already were known to Fairfax police, officers said.

The three will be given a preliminary hearing in Arlington County Court Tuesday before Judge Hugh Reid.

Missourians to Discuss Inauguration Plans

Missouri's plans for honoring its favorite son at the Inauguration Parade will be discussed at a luncheon today of the Washington chapter of the University of Missouri Alumni Association at the YWCA, 17th and K sts. nw.

John A. Ferguson, chairman of the Missouri float committee, will be the featured speaker.

'Brass' to Take Back Seat at Party Dinner

The "brass" will take a back seat at the giant National Truman-Barkley Club dinner at the Mayflower Hotel Tuesday, in favor of the campaign workers who stumped the States.

The State chairmen of the Truman-Barkley clubs will be the guests of honor at the head table with the President and his family.

Truman-Barkley Club headquarters in Washington has received more than 10,000 requests for the $15-a-plate tickets, although only 2100 persons can be seated. Judge Welburn Mayock, treasurer of the National Truman-Barkley Club, yesterday said his office was returning ticket requests as fast as they were received. Some persistent ticket seekers, he said, had even given references in their attempts to attend the dinner.

The doors will open at 6 p. m., and all guests are asked to be in their seats by 6:30, 10 minutes before the President and his family will arrive.

All members of the Cabinet are expected to attend, Mayock said, including the new Secretary of State. Former Secretary of State Cordell Hull and his wife have accepted an invitation to attend, he said.

Veteran entertainer George Jessel, will act as master of ceremonies, introducting, among others, Lum and Abner, Phil Regan, Kay Starr, novelist; Elliot Paul and Al Ammons at two pianos, Lena Horne, the Flying L Quartette, the Purdue University Glee Club, and Lucy Munroe singing the National Anthem.

President Truman and Vice President-elect Barkley will make short speeches, Mayock said.

GI Air Training Plea Being Studied

Judge David A. Pine took under advisement yesterday a motion to dismiss an injunction suit designed to lift Veterans' Administration restrictions on GI flight training.

The District Court suit was brought by Willie G. Slocumb, jr., 27, of Portsmouth, Va. Active in his behalf are the AMVETS.

131 Out-of-Towners to Assist 1700 Police Inauguration Day

Eighteen hundred policemen will be on duty Inauguration Day, Supt. Robert J. Barrett said yesterday.

Among them will be 131 members of police forces from New Orleans, Chicago, Philadelphia, New York City and Cleveland who will work in plain clothes and aid in protecting the public from petty thieves. They will include "some of the best pickpocket men in the county," Major Barrett said.

Augmenting the police on parade duty will be 600 troops, most of whom have had military police duty, 250 members of the Marine Corps Reserve, and 600 Boy Scouts.

Major Barrett at one time proposed that the contemplated civilian police reserve be used in connection with the Inauguration, but this plan was abandoned because of the lack of time to train the reserves. Formation of the reserves has not been approved by the Commissioners.

A companion plan to use District firemen as auxiliaries was dropped when it was decided to hold them on special fire watches.

Police forces on parade duty will be under the command of Inspector Floyd Truscott, assistant superintendent of police.

Police cruisers with two-way radios will be located at first-aid stations along the parade route, and at each end of the route, the White House and the Capitol.

Major Barrett said 500 signs are being posted at approaches to Washington urging motorists to park in outlying sections and use public transportation to reach the ceremonies and parade. The signs are being attached to speed limit signs and will be posted as far as 25 miles from the District line.

Metropolitan Police scout cars will be parked at each major entrance to the city on Inauguration Day to warn motorists of crowded conditions.

Special arrangements are being made to handle any emergency traffic across the parade route that may become necessary.

Traffic "cones" will be formed with steel cables on streets intersecting the parade route. The cones will converge to a tip thus forming a single lane of traffic to permit passage of emergency traffic. The cones will be controlled by police and be kept free of spectators.

All police on duty will be served lunch at the department's expense.

Among top police officials who will be present, Major Barrett said, are H. F. Phillips, chief of police in Presidents Truman's home town, Independence, Mo., and Homer Garrison, director of the Texas State highway patrol and president of the International Association of Chiefs of Police.

Major Barrett expects to ride in the parade in a car equipped with both telephone and two-way radio, he said.

Wearing special shoulder patches showing the Capitol in white on a blue background, 100 police motorcycle men will participate in the parade. They will start in the usual "V" formation, and from time to time form the President's initials, "H" and "T."

In a handbill addressed to visitors, Major Barrett asks them not to leave luggage, clothing, cameras or other valuables in their parked automobiles at any time.

In a letter to the police force he asked "all members to be solicitous of strangers in the city, to be patient and sympathetic and to do the best they know how."

Reminding the force that "our department will be looked to for security of the President, the regulation of the increased volume of traffic and assistance to the many visitors," he added that "Washington is judged by its policemen."

Magistrate Alan Bowie of Hyattsville Police Court and Charles A. Vickers, 43-year-old Hillside, Md., painter, renewed old acquaintance in court yesterday—at a cost of $130 to the painter.

Vickers, veteran of numerous court appearances in the past two years, smiled affable recognition at the judge as he stood before the bench and pleaded guilty to drunken driving, reckless driving and passing a red light on November 21.

Remarked Judge Bowie, "It's going to end up either with your neck broken or you in the House of Correction. You better keep liquor out of your hide."

He fined Vickers $100 for drunken driving, $25 for reckless driving, and $5 for passing the stoplight. Vickers' driving permit also will be revoked, the court said.

'Dimes' Start in Red

Fairfax County must outdo itself in the March of Dimes drive beginning today to get back in the black, County Chairman W. Franklin Gooding said yesterday.

The county chapter last year borrowed $16,000 from the national foundation, he said, to help care for the record number of polio cases in the county. The money must be repaid, he said.

This amount in itself is more than the county has contributed to the drive in any previous year, he said.

Floridan Scoffs At Red Lemonnik

By The Associated Press

Florida undertook to burst Russia's great lemonnik bubble yesterday.

Lemonnik, a Soviet scientist claimed, is a medicine which combats fatigue and sleepiness. He said it was derived from a bushy Far Eastern tree that smells like lemons.

When it's lemonnik blossom time in Novosibirsk, it's time for Florida to do a little investigating, W. D. Outman, Washington representative of the Florida commissioner of agriculture, studied the Moscow dispatch with interest.

He speculated that Soviet horticulturists had stumbled upon a runt marxist lemon and were just finding out some of the virtues of the delicious citrus fruit.

In Line With Other Red Feats

The lemonnik experiments said to have been carried on by Prof. D. M. Rossiski were described in the Soviet press. It previously has listed such Russian achievements as the invention of wireless telegraphy, the airplane, and the electric double blanket with dual controls and built-in television.

"The professor has picked a lemon as sure as you're born," Florida's agricultural ambassador allowed.

"Look here where he claims lemonnik has good stimulating and toning-up qualities.'

"Why, the juice of Florida lemons not only has that in a superlative degree, but it is favored by beautiful women as a facial astringent and hair rinse, and is delightful in tea, whether served hot or iced.

"It also will remove rust spots from tablecloths.

"Compounded carefully with an easily obtained chemical and mixed with chipped ice, its toning-up qualities are considered even more remarkable in some respects. In that form it is known as a tom collinsnik."

Might Thrive in Arctic California

The Russian professor has been giving lemonnik in tablet form to Russians with that tired feeling. He said they all felt dandy, just like the natives of the region where the tree grows. The natives chew lemonnik leaves if they don't have time to make it into tea.

Outman expressed the belief that that was a funny way to eat lemons.

"In Florida we eat the fruit and rake up the leaves," he observed.

Does Florida plan to ask the Russians for some slips from their lemonnik trees?

"No," Outman said. "My information is that these trees come from southern Siberia and probably would be more adaptable to the snow-covered orange groves of southern California."

Blonde Dancer Called Fugitive

Bob Mitchum Double Rushes To Aid Vickie

New York, Jan. 13 (U.P.).—A man claiming to be movie star Robert Mitchum dashed into the courthouse today where dancer Vickie Evans was facing a judge on a charge of being a fugitive from California justice.

He said he had come to help her. But he wasn't Mitchum. Mitchum was in Hollywood.

Yesterday the blonde Miss Evans was mentioned in connection with the "Black Dahlia" murder mystery. A suspect said she had been his wife. But that, too, turned out a phony, she said.

"I must be made of iron or I'd go nuts," Miss Evans said. "Heaven only knows what will happen to me next."

She won an adjournment until January 21 of the hearing on the fugitive warrant. Her codependants Mitchum, actress Lila Leeds and real estate man Robin Ford, all charged in a marijuana case, threw themselves on the mercy of the court in Hollywood Monday. But Miss Evans was not present.

The Mitchum impersonator so resembled the actor, reporters at first accepted his statement he had just flown in from Hollywood.

Correction

January 8 the Gallup Poll reported results of a poll on the question, "During the past year have you or your family felt, at any time, that you could not get enough to eat?" The text and headline of the report created an erroneous impression that the 14 per cent who answered the question in the affirmative were going hungry. Actually the findings indicated only that one seventh had felt, at some time, that they could not get enough food—not necessarily that they were starving or in dire straits. The misleading impression was the result of inadequate analysis and copy-editing by the editorial staff of the Poll.

Postal Receipts Set All-Time High In Hyattsville

Hyattsville postoffice did an all-time record business last year, Postmaster Egbert F. Tingley announced yesterday.

Postal receipts for 1948, he said, came to $118,560, a gain of 20 per cent over 1947 revenues and 39 per cent over money received in 1946. Ten years ago, he said, money coming in totaled only $31, 238.

Some 510,000 letters and cards were mailed during the Christmas rush, and about 915,000 distributed to the 43,000 persons now served by the postoffice. On December 20—peak day—the office handled 217,000 pieces of mail, nearly as much as a normal week's business.

Equal Rights Proposal For Women Introduced

A proposed constitutional amendment to guarantee equal rights for women was introduced in the Senate yesterday by 15 Republican and 13 Democratic members.

The new article would state that equality of rights "shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or any state on account of sex."

B. & A. Fare Raise

Rockville Drops Manslaughter Case

Charges of manslaughter against Dr. Alfred H. Stanton, 35, of 4420 50th st. nw., which grew out of a fatal traffic accident last January 4, were dropped yesterday in Rockville Police Court.

Killed in the accident on the Rockville pike was Mrs. Margaret J. Stanton of Rockville as she alighted from a bus and started to cross the street. The deceased was not a relative of the physician.

Music, Murder And Mirth Mixed

By Richard L. Coe

IN THE CAPITOL'S "Unfaithfully Yours," Preston Sturges imagines what goes on in the mind of a symphony conductor while leading a concert. I found it very funny indeed, a combination of sophistication and slapstick, with Rex Harrison immensely amusing as the impatient, jealous musician.

The Capitol's magnet for the crowds this week, though, is snowy Hollywood's Jane Powell. This 18-year-old veteran of some of Metro's big musicals—"Holiday in Mexico," "Three Daring Daughters," "A Date With Judy" and "Luxury Liner"—is a winsome child with one of those microphone voices. Jane is the darling of all ages and a packed house gave her a fine welcome yesterday.

Although you may be inclined to think Mr. Sturges is seriously going out for melodrama (particularly if you drift in after the conductor's mind gets wandering), the slick Sturges bite is there after all. This dawns on you gradually, for this is not so broad a picture, say, as "Hail the Conquering Hero" or "The Miracle of Morgan's Creek."

The humor will be more evident to you if first you consider that enfant terrible of music, Britain's Sir Thomas Beecham, whose family business was those little liver pills, about which Sir Thomas once wrote a delectable limerick. Sir Thomas is a mighty vivid character, given to holding press interviews in bed, stating his mind with utmost clarity and blessed with the wit to call his autobiography "A Minged Chime."

Slapstick in Real Life

We come then, to the role Harrison is playing, Sir Alfred de Carter (stretch a bit and you'll get it). This vivid gentleman is married to a young wife, perfectly happy in his whirlwind of work until something prompts him to suspect his lady has been visiting the bedroom of his handsome young secretary.

During a concert (Rossini's "Semiramide," Wagner's "Tannhauser" Venusburg music and Tschaikowsky's "Francesca da Rimini"), Sir Alfred imagines what he'll do to his wife when he gets home. First he plans a sleek, finely-achieved murder, in which the secretary is made to seem guilty. Then he sees himself as the forgiving husband. After the concert, still in a swivet of jealous fury, he attempts to follow through the murder as he conceived it—and thoroughly bungles the job in the best slapstick manner.

These shifts from the sophisticated t the lowest of gags may baffle you, but plow right through and I think you'll enjoy things much as I did. Rudy Vallee is along with that millionaire impression he does so well (remember "The Palm Beach Story"? and it's a neat job. Linda Darnell is the wife, and such people as Barbara Lawrence, Edgar Kennedy, Lionel Stander and Kurt Kreuger are on tap.

It's possible you'll not find this so satisfying as Sturges' previous comedies. I never have thought he's touched "The Lady Eve." Still, I'll settle for the chuckles, hoots and quiet bemusements of "Unfaithfully Yours" and be thankful.

Jane Powell Charms

Miss Powell, the Deanna Durbin of her day and possibly the Jeanette MacDonald of the future, manages a good deal of charm and poise, the sort of youngster youngsters like to be like. She sings four songs: "It's a Wonderful Day," Lily Strickland's popular "Ma Curly Headed Babby," "I've Told Every Little Star" and "Love Is Where You Find It." The magnifying ways of the ubiquitous microphone give you no idea what her voice is really like, but, as I say, the crowds love her.

Georgie Kaye, a young man with a fresh twist of gags, the Three Harpers, harmonica gents, and Vince and Gloria Haycock, tapsters, round out a bill that gets under way with Milt Slosser luring you to sing the popular hits.

TRAVELERS' NOTES: Ethel Merman's "Annie Get Your Gun" company will continue at New York's Imperial "indefinitely;" as soon as the closing seemed settled, business boomed, and so long as it does, the musical comedy queen will stay with it . . . The touring "Annie," with Billie Worth in the lead, plays the next two weeks, beginning Monday night, at Ford's, Baltimore . . . It looks like thumbs down for Garson Kanin's "The Smile of the World," about a Supreme Court justice, which opened Wednesday night . . . This weekend brings the end to "The Rape of Lucretia," the Benjamin Britten "opera," at New York's Ziegfeld; there are matinees Saturday and Sunday, with Kitty Carlisle singing the final performance Sunday night.

"UNFAITHFULLY YOURS." 20th Century-Fox release produced, written and directed by Preston Sturges. Photographed by Victor Milner. Music from Rossini, Wagner and Tschaikowsky and by Alfred Newman. At the Capitol.

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich.

IT'S PRETTY CLEAR now that George Marshall is the speck in the ointment that is derailing the merger of the National and All-American football leagues, after playing it coy and professing no lack of love for the City of Baltimore.

POVICH

All of a sudden Marshall, 51 per cent owner of the Redskins, has come full into the open to announce that Baltimore can have his affections—for a price. All he wants is money.

At least, the New York Mirror quotes Marshall, viz: "The newspapers were dead wrong in charging my being antagonistic to Baltimore. I like Baltimore, but business is business. Baltimore is within the territorial rights of Washington, one of the best franchises in pro football.

"We will gladly welcome Baltimore if the Colts pay us half of what I think our franchise is worth. After all, we have a value on our territorial rights, and should be compensated for sharing that territory."

THE DISPOSITION OF BALTIMORE is the big stumbling block in the fusion of the two leagues. Marshall is agreeable to the inclusion of San Francisco and Cleveland but wants no Baltimore club competing for patronage within his 100-mile territorial radius. Other NFL clubs would gladly vote Baltimore in to gain peace in the war that saw only three of the 18 teams in both leagues make money last season.

Marshall's stand is in striking contrast to the action of Tim Mara's New York Giants who have invited the homeless Boston Yankees to settle down in the Giants' own back yard at the Polo Grounds or Yankee Stadium, waiving the territorial rights over which Marshall raises such a rumpus.

It isn't quite a magnanimous offer by Marshall, anyway, to permit the Baltimore club to operate in the NFL league, even at a price. The price he wants is too forbidding, based on the sale price of the Philadelphia Eagles which recently was set at $250,000. The Eagles franchise never did make money as Eastern or League champions. The Redskins never lost money, no matter where they finished. The worth of the Redskins' franchise could be set at at least $400,000, meaning that Marshall would expect to collect $200,000 as a tribute for invasion of teritorial rights which the Maras are giving away.

BALTIMORE, naturally enough, isn't going to dig up any such figure to appease Marshall. The Colts are not yet over a barrel to that extent. Marshall's strategy is clear enough, however. He's hoping the Colts, for lack of support by other club owners in the All-America, will be starved out and thus removed from competition for the Redskins' patronage.

But unless Dan Topping does a flip-flop, inclusion of Baltimore in the proposed new, bigger league is a condition of any merger. Topping has said he will continue to operate an All-America club in New York next season unless peace can be honorably arrived at, meaning that the Colts are not to be shut out of any merger. The All-America doesn't exactly have a gun at its head. They aren't suffering much more than the NFL clubs.

Most of the teams in both leagues are hurting. When the Champion Eagles can show a $29,000 deficit in a title-winning year, conditions aren't healthy in the NFL, either. If peace isn't arranged, it will be a test of which club owners can stand losses the longest and except in a couple of spots, the All-America clubs are as well-heeled financially as the NFL.

JAKE EMBRY, president of the Colts, has repeated that he has the promise of such as Topping, Mickey McBride, who owns the Cleveland Browns, Ben Lindheimer of the Los Angeles Dons, and Tony Morabito of San Francisco, that they won't desert his club and jump to the NFL. They're willing to merge with the NFL only if Baltimore is included in the deal.

But it is Topping who holds the key to the entire situation. If he sticks with the All-America, it can go again, in little worse fashion than the NFL. If Topping withdraws his support and kisses off his losses to date and gets out of the football business, the AAC would have to collapse. Without representation in New York, it couldn't pretend to be a major pro football league.

They'll go to the mat with the whole situation next week at Chicago, where both leagues will hold executive meetings. Marshall could thwart the merger by insisting on a big price for letting Baltimore into his NFL territory. If Marshall gets his price and the merger goes through, he'll command the admiration of at least one man, Tim Mara, who gave away his New York territorial rights for nothing. But Mr. Mara's admiration for Mr. Mara may be somewhat dubious.

Despite Two Straight Losses

Take It From Red Auerbach—Caps Are Better Than Bullets

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Despite two consecutive shellackings by them, one by 20 points and the most recent by a more respectable 14, Red Auerbach couldn't be prompted to say that the Baltimore Bullets had the number of his Washington Caps.

"They were hot and we weren't," he was saying last night by way of explaining the Caps loss to the Bullets.

* * * * * * *

Be that as it may, one could hardly accuse the Caps of jumping right out of a frozen food locker and into the game.. They scored 92 points themselves but still managed to lose by 14 points.

And how did the coach of the Eastern Division BAA pacesetters account for that?

"You might say we were a bit lax defensively," he replied, "but don't let anybody kid you—we're better than they are any day."

Right now the season's score between these two hot intercity rivals is two victories apiece. The rubber match comes up January 26, in Baltimore.

"If they beat us then," Red continued, "I might change my tune, but right now I'll say and say again we're the better ball club.

"I must admit that the Bullets have improved tremendously the last six weeks. You have to give all the credit to Jeanette (Buddy Jeanette, Baltimore player-coach).

"He took advantage of Indianapolis and Fort Wayne in a couple of trades and the result is he has a winning team. He passed off John Mahnken to Indianapolis for Hal Tidrick and Fred Lewis. Indianapolis, a newcomer to our league, thought they were getting a bargain in Mahnken, but Jeanette knew how good Tidrick and Lewis were and jumped at the trade.

"From Fort Wayne, Buddy obtained Jim Pelkington for Leo Mogus. Pelkington, although 34, is still a good spot player and has helped the Bullets considerably.

"Tidrick and Lewis wrecked us last night. They got 25 points between them and they scored just when it looked like we might catch up.

"And that little Chick Reiser! He got away with murder. He held Bob Feerick to three field goals and when I say held I don't mean checked. I mean held. I won't say he played dirty, but I won't say he was the best sportsman on the court, either.

"Those 20 and 14 point defeats don't worry us. As long as we are getting licked, we don't care if we lose by 25 points or by two. They count the same in the loss column, don't they?"

Baltimore, Auerbach concluded, "bears down against us more than anybody else. But remember this, they've only whipped us four times in two years and they've had 12 chances to do it."

Sub, Pass, Punt Rules Modified By NCAA

The national intercollegiate football rules committee today revised the highly controversial "free substitution" regulation.

Winding up their annual session, members decided:

To eliminate the rule that permitted one substitute to enter the game while the clock was running.

When the ball changes hands from one team to another and the clock is running, there will be no restriction on the number of substitutes sent in by either or both teams, but all of this must be accomplished within the regulation 25 seconds after the referee has placed the ball down.

Punt Rule Changed

There were other changes in the rule book, designed to encourage offensive tactics.

In the future, a man can return a punt which he receives from behind his own end zone. In the past a punt kicked into the end zone became an automatic touchback and taken to the 20 yard line for play. Now the receiver will be allowed, if he so elects, to try to run it out. If he is tackled in the end zone, it becomes a touchback and goes into play on the 20-yard line. If he runs the ball beyond the goal line the ball goes into play wherever he is tackled.

A move to encourage forward passing in the end zone also was inserted.

From now on a legal forward pass incompleted in the offensive team's end zone is to be ruled simply an incompleted pass instead of a safety, if the loose ball is recovered from the opposing team. If the pass is completed inside the end zone, however, and the receiver is tackled, it is a safety.

Pass Rules Modified

The committee, clarifying one rule, stipulated if the man under center—usually the quarterback in the T-formation—is close enough to receive the snapback from the center in a hand-to-hand transaction, he is ineligible to receive a pass.

This clarifies the rule which says a man must be at least one yard behind his center to be eligible to receive a pass.

Some players with unusually long arms could receive the center's pass-back and actually be a yard or more behind him. Such a situation nullified the intent of the original statute.

Temple, NYU Win In Garden

New York, Jan. 13.—In one of the most thrilling games in Madison Square Garden this season, Temple defeated St. John's of Brooklyn, 81-79, here tonight in an overtime struggle.

The tense opener kept 14,289 double-header fans goggle-eyed with the score tied 12 times and the lead changing hands 15 times.

Nelson Bobb, who led both teams with 29 points, made the deciding basket for Josh Cody's Owls. Bobb traded points with St. John's Dick McGuire almost as rapidly as the lead changed, with McGuire winding up with 25.

It was just as well the first game was a humdinger. Anything would have been anticlimactic, but inept Syracuse just about emptied the house when it scored only nine points in the first half of the night-cap. NYU by that time had 31 and coasted to a 68-45 victory.

Joel Kaufman led the Violets with 25 points

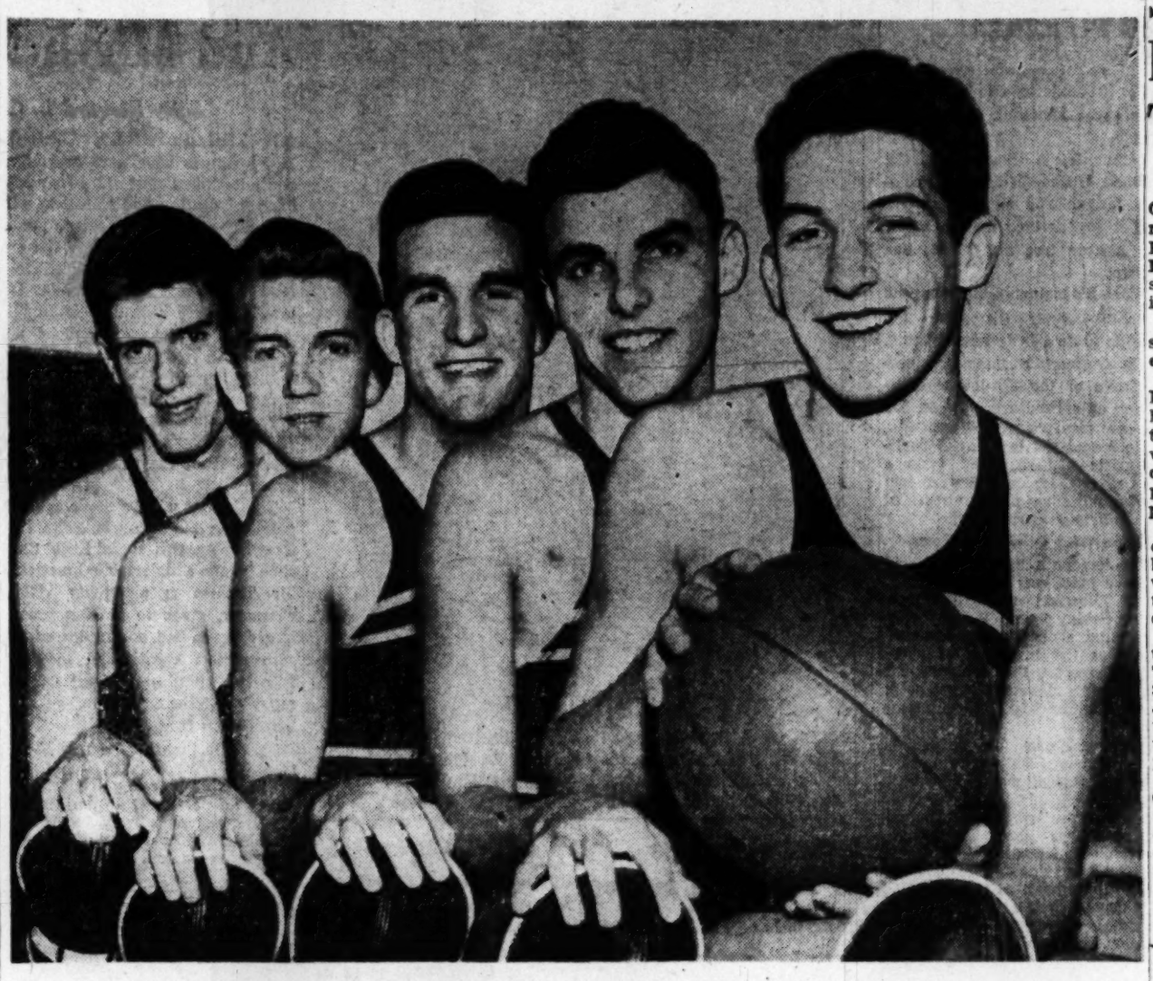
Team Work Six Years in Making



By Henry Rohland—The Washington Post

TEAMWORK DOES IT—Bethesda-Chevy Chase High can thank this quintet for its eight straight basketball victories this season. It comprises (left to right) Sam Towne, Don Schneider, Dick Beckwith, Fred Genau and Vince Guandolo. All but Schneider, the team captain, have been playing together for six years. They started out at Leland Junior High in 1942

18-Game High Slate Topped By GW, W-L

Unbeaten George Washington High and once-licked Washington-Lee settle their pent-up basketball differences tonight in an 8 o'clock game on the W-L court in Arlington.

The northern Virginia struggle tops today's bill of 18 high school games in the area.

The W-L-GW feud is so hot that referees are being imported from Richmond to officiate the game. An argument over choice of officials caused cancellation of one of the GW-W-L games last year, and almost resulted in a complete rupture of athletic relations.

George Waschington is a slight favorite with its six-game winning streak on the line. W-L has a five-game streak of its own, and has lost only to unbeaten Bethesda-Chevy Chase in seven outings.

An Interhigh League game is also on the agenda with McKinley Tech entertaining Chamberlain at 3:30 p. m.

The Catholic High League's weekly double-header sees St. John's tackling Georgetown Prep and St. Anthony's facing DeMatha at 7:30 o'clock tonight at Catholic U. gymnasium.

Have Won 8 Straight

Four of Bethesda's Regulars Played as Unit in Junior High

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Bethesda-Chevy Chase's Barons, tops in Montgomery County in past years, are extending their realm over the rest of the Washington area. Their chief weapon is teamwork, six years in development.

Four of the five Baron regulars have been playing basketball together since they became acquainted at Leland Junior High.

Sam Towne, Vince Guandolo, Fred Genau and Dick Beckwith came to B-CC three years ago with three years of junior high comradeship on the court behind them. They made the squad instantly.

Second-stringers last season, they were promoted this year, and together with Don Schneider, a "foreigner" from Kensington, Md., have carved out eight straight victories.

It's no snap schedule that the Barons play, either. They are the only team to beat Washington-Lee of Arlington, and Bladensburg, and are prime contenders for the Metropolitan Washington championship which is decided in March.

Leland Feeds Reserves, Too

The Barons are deep in reserves, and in this department, too, there is a Leland flavor. Roddy Ware and John Scott, also seniors, played alongside the "big four" during their junior high days.

"Their experience as a team makes my job all the easier," says Coach Al Voigt. "I never have to tell those boys where to pass or who to set up for a shot. They know instinctively."

Olivar Quits Cats for Loyola

Philadelphia, Jan. 13 (AP).—Jordon Olivar today resigned as head football coach at Villanova College to accept a similiar position at Loyola College of Los Angeles.

Father Joseph Dougherty, president of Villanova, announced that Olivar had submitted his resignation and that although he was signed for the 1949 season, "Villanova will not stand in his way."

Loyola's board of athletic control said Olivar accepted a three-year contract at undisclosed terms, by telephone shortly after noon.

Olivar will be accompanied West by Jerry Neri of the Villanova staff. The present Loyola assistant coaches, Bob Shaw and Al Duval, will remain as Olivar's aides. Terry Acquarelli will stay on as freshman coach.

Olivar, 34, indicated in Philadelphia before accepting that salary was the only bar to remaining at Villanova, where he led his teams into bowl contests the past two years. He was reported getting $5000 there, with no immediate boost in prospect. By comparison, Philadelphia stories said, he will get double that figure here.

Embry Plans Trip but Won't Pay Skins Dime

Baltimore, Jan. 13.—Robert C. (Jake) Embry, president of the Baltimore Colts, revealed today that he definitely plans to make a trip to Washington to discuss the troublous pro football situation with George Preston Marshall, Redskin chieftain.

Embry emphatically added that he wouldn't be a party to any Marshall plan that would cost his All-American Conference club a dime

Marshall's franchise in the National League gives him exclusive rights to operate in Washington and a 100-mile radius. Baltimore is only 40 miles away.

Marshall said Wednesday that he would welcome Baltimore into the National, provided the club paid him half what the Washington franchise is worth.

Today Embry countered, "I think Marshall was kidding the newspapermen when he made that statement. We won't pay him a dime.

"As for any infringement on Washington's territorial rights, the intense rivalry between the two clubs would more than make up for that. Marshall would make more money from our two games than he would lose otherwise from our being in the league."

The Colts' head indicated his first overtures probably would take the form of a telephone call.

"I want to get together with Marshall privately and without a lot of ballyhoo," he said. "We won't accomplish anything with big newspaper splurges. The best way is to meet quietly and without a lot of fanfare."

Eagles Deny Sale, Admit Deal Is 'In The Works'

Special to The Post

New York, Jan. 14 (Friday). Owner Alexis Thompson early this morning denied a report that his Philadelphia Eagles National League franchise already had been sold but admitted that a deal was imminent.

Thompson said: "The club isn't sold and won't be sold today. However, a deal is in the works."

In Philadelphia, Commissioner Bert Bell also said the Eagles hadn't yet been sold. Bell revealed that three Quaker City groups still were bidding actively for the pro champions' franchise. "It is expected that one of the groups will put up a deposit today," Bell added.

The Commissioner went on to explain any sale would have to be approved by him and then would be subject to ratification by the other National League club owners.

The syndicate leading the race to buy a championship club that Thompson said lost approximately $20,000 in 1948 was headed by James B. Clark, wealthy contractor and former city chairman of the Democratic Party in Philadelphia.

Reportedly associated with Clark are Frank McNamee, former War Manpower Commision official, and Austin Meehan, sheriff of Philadelphia and a leader of the Republican Party.

The Clark group is said to be composed of approximately 70 individuals who plan to buy stock in varying amounts with the average about $3000.

Hogan Favors Clark

Eagles' Publicity Director Edward S. Hogan said, "the sale has not been consumated but it may be in a couple of days. There still are a lot of things to be ironed out."

Hogan admitted that the Clark syndicate appeared to have the best chance to purchase the franchise. The feeling among club officials was that there would be no personnel shakeup despite the change of ownership.

Sooner Coach In Wisconsin

Norman, Okla., Jan. 13 (AP).—Just what University of Oklahoma Football Coach Bud Wilkinson is doing in Madison, Wis., isn't known to Dr. George L. Cross, university president.

But the Milwaukee Sentinel says it has the answer—"All signs point to Wilkinson as the new University of Wisconsin coach."

The young O. U. coach flew to Wisconsin today. He didn't tell Cross he was going.

"I don't know what Bud is going to do," he said when informed of Wilkinson's trip.

Only yesterday he was offered a new contract. Although neither the university president nor Wilkinson have announced the contract's terms, it presumably calls for $15,000 a year for five years.

Cross said Wilkinson "told the (university) regents the contract was acceptable and added that he could offer no suggestions for improvements."

—In Chandler's Long-Considered Opinion—

Piddling Violations Call for Piddling Fines

By Red Smith
Copyright, 1949, N. Y. Herald Tribune

NEW YORK, JAN. 13.—After months of buffeting by stormy seas, unfavorable winds and snarling riptides, Happy Chandler, baseball's gruff old skipper with the heart of gold, has ridden out the Durocher-Fitzsimmons teapot tempest and brought the bark to harbor. It was as able a job of navigation as could be expected in the circumstances.

There is little ground for quarreling with the decision which the game, aggressive, ever-punching, crowd-pleasing commissioner reached in the case.

There seems no doubt that in hiring Fred Fitzsimmons as coach while that plump character still was under contract to the Boston Braves, Leo Durocher and the other responsible officials of the Giants did perpetrate a technical violation of the rule against tampering with another club's servants.

As Chandler says, it is important to baseball that this rule be enforced and violators be punished when infractions are detected. In arriving at a suitable scale of penalties, the Solomon of Versailles, Ky., adopted the policy of parents who, when the kids get to pulling one another's noses, hold the eldest chiefly responsible on the theory that he ought to know better.

Accordingly, a fine of $2000 was assessed against the New York club along with $500 clips for Durocher and Fitzsimmons. In addition, there was a token suspension of Fitzsimmons for one month but this was made to apply only to the spring training season. Inasmuch as baseball paydays don't arrive until after the championship season starts, this doesn't mean loss of salary by Fitz.

Matter of fact, except for the financial wounds inflicted, nobody suffers but the other, innocent Giant coaches, who will have to take on Fitzsimmons' chores of batting grounders around the infield, hitting fungoes to the pitchers and keeping tabs on lost balls in the Phoenix Arix., training camp.

Both the offense and the penalties were piddling. In these days, a major league club looks with infense loathing upon $1000 bills, using notes of that denomination only for wrapping up the garbage. To be sure, ball players have not, as individuals, quite achieved this attitude, and there are few with hides too tough to show toothmarks after a $500 bite.

Chandler specifically forbade the Giants to pay the fines for Durocher and Fitzsimmons. However, he has no authority to limit their compensation. There is nothing to prevent the club from passing out gifts, legitimate bonuses or salary increases to any employe. By making a special point of it, the commissioner has merely put the Giants on their mettle to find a way around the interdict, if they see fit.

In the years between 1920 and 1933, grocers stocked a malt preparation with a recipe for nonalcoholic near-beer printed on the label. At the bottom of the recipe there appeared a line of large red type reading:

"Warning—Do not add two cakes of yeast to each crock of this mixture, as this causes fermentation and is prohibited by law."

Chandler cannot be accused of persecuting Durocher in this case, for Leo drew the lightest penalty. Indeed, it is not improbable that the commissioner realized that sterner measures for such an insignificant indiscretion would have made a martyr out of his number one whipping boy.

In this case, it was apparent that the chief culprit was Fitz, whose sins were ingratitude and bad manners. There is a rule which antedates the written proscription against tampering. It provides that when an employer has treated you generously and paid you well, you consult him before accepting another job.

If it weren't for Fitzsimmons' record of "long and honorable service in baseball," the commissione" said, Chandler "would deprive the New York club of his services for 1949."

That is a euphemism meaning Fitz would have been flung out on his ear with dim prospects of finding another job at so late a date. The Giants would have survived the deprivation; they could shake at least one coach out of every yucca tree within a day's auto drive of Phoenix.

One dispatch said Chandler was "very much impressed" with the amiable Fitz's character. The commissioner was quoted: "I like Fitz, and I know he told me the truth when he said he didn't realize he was still the property of Boston."

This probably is personalized justice, but you've got to like Fitz. He is easy going and friendly, strictly a laissez-faire guy. When the Phillies were training under his management in their wartime camp in Wilmington, Del., he and his cronies used to while away the evenings in a refreshment parlor operated by one Ralph Tribuani, a fight promoter.

During a bag-punching session one night Tribuani, who read only the boxing news, asked idly, "Fitz, what's your last name?"

"Simmons?" said Tribuani. "I used to know a ball player named Simmons. Played with the Athletics. Al Simmons. You any relation?"

"No," Fitz said agreeably, "I don't think so. No relation."

1913 Version Of Wrestling Had Angles

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

DON'T GET ME WRONG. Along with others, I marvel at the ingenuity of the modern wrestling industry with its Georgeous George (Turner's next week), Orchid Man, Superman, the Angel, Blimp, etc., as well as its team matches, referee baiting, spectator participation and all the other things that go to make up an interesting mat night.

Haight

These and many other gimmicks followed the era of the flying tackle, airplane spin and other niceties, introduced to the sport when the former football stars were chasing Jim Londos and the other oldtimers to cover some years ago.

But don't think for a minute, no matter what you've been told, that wrestling here in the old days was a dull test of mere strength and endurance in slow motion.

True, wrestling in those days served as a come-on for burlesque shows or visa versa. But usually the customers were more interested in the heavy matmen than the buxom babes. The girl shows almost always followed the same pattern but the wrestling matches were unpredictable.

GIVEN A QUARTER EACH to get haircuts, Jim Mooney and I hiked several miles to have the tonsorial work done at the Barbers' School for a dime, the thus-saved 15 cents making us eligible for the Bijou peanut gallery.

"Gentlemen," he yelled. "I have here a telegram that speaks for itself. Train delayed by wreck north of Elkton, Md., stop have rented automobile stop expect arrive in time stop Zerega is a bum stop.' signed Bull Montana."

The place was in an uproar. Zerega backers bellowed, "He's yellow," Montana rooters screamed back, "Bull will make it."

At intermission the orchestra blurted a fanfare and the announcer again marched to the center of the stage. He didn't have to ask for attention. It was another wire, to wit: "Leaving Havre de Grace stop driver gets $200 if on time stop don't let Zerega run out stop—signed Bull Montana."

During the second act the telegrams came thick and fast, from Edgewood, Baltimore, Laurel, Hyattsville, and some points in between that I never heard of. Each was from Montana, telling of his progress and taking a verbal dig at Zerega.

The fans were half crazy. The can-can was forgotten as fights broke out here and there to be quickly quelled by the army of policemen always present at wrestling matches in those days.

When the final curtain went down, there was an outburst from customers seated nearest the rear doors. Into sight came Bull Montana, his coat torn, his hat battered in and carrying two suitcases as he charged down the aisle yelling, "Let me at that guy!"

IN DUE TIME the two sneering rivals faced each other on the mat. I can't remember the play-by-play in detail, but they threw one another out several rows from the stage, were in and out of the ring and behaved not unlike our present-day performers.

I do remember that I asked a Montana fan for the time and he pulled out his Ingersoll and snapped, "She's a 2 o'clock and don't bother me."

Jim and I didn't stay for the finish. We walked home with visions of broomsticks dancing in our heads. I managed to sneak into bed but Jim's pop caught him and Jim didn't sit down at the movies for the next three episodes of "Perils of Pauline," if you know what I mean.

However, Jim always said it was worth it, and I agreed, because (don't tell anybody) from our seats near the window in the Bijou peanut gallery, we had seen a fellow looking mighty like Bull Montana go down a fire escape carrying two suit cases—just before the wrestler charged down the aisle!

Batcheller Boots Home 47th Winner

By Fred Hayden

Tropical Park, Fla., Jan. 13 (AP).—Gustave Ring because the leading owner of the waning meeting and Apprentice Logan Batcheller widened his margin over rival riders here today when Rare Jewel captured the Shanballymore Purse.

The comeback campaigner from the Washington, D. C.-owned stable finished the six furlong dash five lengths in the van but Batcheller, knowing the grey gelding has a tendency to falter, rode him out to assure victory.

The Rarco Stable's I'll Be was second by a head, with Russell A. Firestone's Quickset third.

Rare Jewel Pays $4.60

Batcheller, earning a consecutive double on Rare Jewel, was clicking for the forty-seventh time at the 38-day-old meeting. Owner Ring was chalking up his ninth triumph of the Coral Gables session, finally passing Bruce Livie's Bobanet Stable, which has one less score here.

Rare Jewel paid the talent $4.60. A crowd of 9558 saw the son of Rosemont speed home in 1:11 3/5. Until the gelding won his winter debut on January 3, he had not been postward since August of 1947. He tossed off a wide lead and finished second in a subsequent effort here, but won "by himself" this afternoon.

The main offering on the all-claiming card was for smart platers in the $10,000-$8000 brackets, Rare Jewel running for the higher figure.

Hoyas in Eight Armory Races

Six area colleges, two high schools and a prep school are all getting last-minute workouts in preparation for their parts in the Evening Star track games tomorrow night in the National Guard Armory.

Georgetown will lead the local parade with entries in eight events. Leading the Hoya pack will be Bill Mitchell, who'll try to repeat his 70-yard high hurdle victory of last year.

In addition, Hoya colors will be seen in the D. C. AAU 100-yard dash, the AAU 600, 880, the handicap mile relay, the intercollegiate mile relay, Sections A and B and the intercollegiate 2-mile relay.

William Collins of Howard, whose 1:14.8 set the D.C. AAU 600-yard record last year, will be back. Collins, running also in the CIAA mile relay, is the best Bison bet in the four events entered by Howard.

David Stockman in the tough Invitation 70-yard high hurdles is only Naval Academy representative running as an individual as the Middies concentrate on teamwork in three relay events.

With only Rod Jackson of last year's winning quartet returning, Catholic will try to make it two straight in the Mason-Dixon Conference sprint medley relay. The Cardinals also have hopefuls entered in the D. C. AAU 100-yard dash and in the intercollegiate mile relay.

Gallaudet's lone entry is also in the Mason-Dixon relay, while of the high schools, Dunbar, Cardozo, and Bullis Prep will have representation.

Our Lady of Victory Loses to Corcoran

Corcoran won its first game in three starts last night when the team waltzed to a 42-18 victory over Our Lady of Victory in the School League of the Boys Club of Washington. Corcoran's Frank Cohen was high scorer with 17.

In the Senior House League S. & M. defeated Hutchison Furniture, 35-31, for their first win in three starts. Buddy Lally paced S. & M. with 16 points.

American, CU Court Teams Meet Tonight

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

American U. and Catholic U., usually college basketball stepchildren here, monopolize the local scene tonight at AU gym when the meet in an important Mason-Dixon Conference game.

While neither is able to schedule a game with Georgetown, GW, or Maryland, chances are they play as good a brand of basketball as may be seen in the District. Tonight's winner still hopes to challenge the top Big Three team for the area championship.

Staff Cassell's classy Eagles will be favored over Catholic U. but the rivalry is spirited and the game should be close. The underdog Cardinals' prospect of victory looks brighter in that American's top-scorer, Leroy Ishman, is supposed to see only limited action.

Ishman played only about five minutes in the Eagles' 45-42 loss to Siena. He twisted his ankle and it still hasn't responded. Ishman, who has registered 106 points in nine games, definitely won't start. His place will be taken by husky Ed Moffatt, brother of GW's Johnny.

American, unbeaten in three conference games and a popular choice to win the Mason-Dixon championship, has a six-game winning streak against its intra-city rival.

Abe Rosenfeld's Cardinals, paced by high-scoring Jim Losty and Capt. Gene Szklarz, should wage a stubborn battle. Last year, they fought hard before losing twice to the Eagles by five points.

Losty, sharp-shooting forward, leads District collegians in point production with 132 points in nine games. The Cardinals have lost only one of them and have a 5-1 record in league play.

VMI was scheduled to meet Maryland tonight and George Washington tomorrow night in Southern Conference games. However, the Virginia cadets are taking part in the Inauguration Parade here next week and examinations have been moved up a week. No dates have been set yet for the postpond games.

American U. boxers open a six-match schedule tonight at Westminster against Western Maryland.

Loyola of Baltimore, meets Catholic U. in a wrestling match 3 p. m. at Brookland and the C. U. swimmers play host to Seton Hall.

Laurel, Pimlico Hit

Jersey Track Dates Offer Little Balm for Maryland

Allocation of 135 racing days to New Jersey's three tracks yesterday didn't promise much relief to the older Maryland tracks which increasingly have suffered from the competition.

Camden's Garden State Park, just outside Philadelphia, opens and closes the season. Garden State's split dates start April 29 to May 30 (27 days) and wind up October 3 to October 22 (18 days).

Meanwhile the resort tracks, Oceanport's Monmouth Park and Atlantic City received choice summer dates. Monmouth will operate from June 20 to August 10; Atlantic City, August 11 to October 1.

Mutuel wagering at Maryland's mile tracks, which operate 100 days, dropped more than 15 million dollars. Hardest hit track was Havre de Grace which was forced to buck unsuccessfully Garden State and then had an even less lucrative summer meeting. Handle at the 'Graw was off 29.83 per cent.

Stuart S. Janney, chairman of the Maryland Racing Commission, was informed of the Jersey dates by The Washington Post. Janney said he'd have to study them before venturing any comment.

"There doesn't seem to be much difference, though," Janney added. "Offhand, I'd say it might be better for Havre de Grace and not as good for Pimlico and Laurel."

Janney explained that date requests originate among the tracks. Now that Jersey has laid its cards on the table, the Maryland operators will get together and file their requests before the March 1 deadline.

Unofficially, the Maryland tracks believe they have worked out dates that will be to the advantage of the State. The lineup calls for at least a week of Havre de Grace's second meeting being conducted at Laurel.

Here's the schedule: Bowie, March 28 to April 9 and last two weeks in November; Havre de Grace, April 11 to April 30 and seven days at Laurel in fall; Pimlico, May 2 to May 14 and first two weeks of November; Laurel, last week in September (for Havre de Grace) and full month of October.

Lions Host To Springfield

The Washington Lions open a home-and-home series with the Springfield Indians tonight at Uline Arena, determined to break out of the Eastern Division cellar in the American Hockey League. The return game of the series will be played tomorrow night in Springfield.

A win or a tie tonight will lift the locals off the bottom rung which they share with the Philadelphia Rockets. The Rockets, resting tonight, won't be able to do much about it.

The Lions' sick list will be reduced by one tonight as Davey Maguire, injured in Buffalo last Sunday, returns to action.

Johnny Blood To Be Wed Here

Johnny Blood, former Green Bay Packer football star whose real name is John V. McNally of New Richmond, Wis., will be married Saturday, January 22, at Parkfairfax, Alexandria, Va., to Marguerite Streeter of Minneapolis.

Miss Streeter is the daughter of Leo C. Streeter, of the Agriculture Department. She was graduated from the University of Minnesota in 1938.

Shapiro, Povich TD Club Guests

Shirley Povich, sports columnist of The Washington Post, will interview David Shapiro, cocaptain of George Washington University's basketball team who exposed an attempted "fix" recently, at the Touchdown Club's first 1949 weekly luncheon Monday at 12:30 p. m.

George Morris Fay, United States district attorney for the District of Columbia, also will be present.

Caps Stage Clinic In Arlington Tonight

Bank Loans Off $2,181,000 Here in Week

By S. Oliver Goodman

Washington bank loans dropped $2,181,000 in the week ended January 5, but remained $23,484,000 above the same date last year.

This was shown yesterday in the weekly report of the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond, which placed total loans and discounts of local banks at $229,409,000 on January 5. The report includes figures of 17 out of 19 Washington banks.

As pointed out yesterday in the Federal Reserve Board's report for 440 leading banks throughout the country, bank loans slumped 195 million in the first week of 1949, a more than seasonal decline. It was the largest drop in about 10 years.

Washington bankers seemed little concerned over the drop here, admitting it was more than normal but attributing it mostly to year-end expirations and repayments of loans.

Counter to the national trend, real estate loans here for the week ended January 5 rose to $80,092,900, a gain of $1,181,000 for the week.

Demand deposits of local banks advanced sharply to $750,533,000 as of January 5, as compared with $729,325,000 in the previous week. Time deposits of $178,173,000 compared with $177,561,000 in the week ended December 29. The advances were attributed partly to "window dressing" in preparation for year-end statements.

POWER RECORD: Potomac Electric Power Co. yesterday reported record 1948 electricity sales of 2,007,490,888 kilowatt hours, an increase of 9.59 per cent over the previous year. December sales aggregated 174,980,679 kilowatt hours, a gain of 5.76 per cent over the same 1947 month. The figures include the parent firm operating in Washington and subsidiaries in Maryland.

BOWLES PLAN: Chester Bowles, the new Governor of Connecticut, recommends in a book published this week that an "economic brain" steer the Nation safely away from the dangers of inflation and deflation. Bowles, formerly director of the Office of Price Administration, suggests that the President's Council of Economic Advisers could function as the "brain." Bowles presents his views in a collection of economic opinion, "Saving American Capitalism." (Alfred A. Knopf $4.) The symposium is edited by Seymour E. Harris, professor of economics at Harvard University. "I would like to see," Bowles writes, "The functions of the President's Economic Council expanded to give them authority, within specific limits, to move taxes up and down to meet the current needs of our economy . . ."

AIB CLASSES: Second semester of American Institute of Banking classes will start January 24. Plans were outlined at a meeting of the Washington Chapter's educational committee in the Mayflower. Stephen O. Porter, committee chairman, said that the commercial law course will be taught by Herbert R. Grossman, economics by Miles E. Robinson, money and banking by Arnold E. Chase, and accounting by Thomas Howarth.

Wall Street Frets: 'Buy, Sell?' Result: Stalemate in Stocks

By J. A. Livingston

"This stock market!" said Alice. "First, Truman's elected. The market goes down. Then Truman delivers his State-of-the-Union message. The market goes up." Alice shook her head so furiously you wondered how it held on to her neck.

"It's all very simple," submitted the Mad Hatter. "Truman took Wall Street by surprise. So the market dropped. Then Truman delivered his State-of-the-Union message. Wall Street was not surprised. He had said nearly everything before. So the market went up. That's called discounting the news."

Livingston

"What's that?" demanded the Red Queen.

"Doing the opposite of what you've already done," said the Mad Hatter.

"That's beyond me," said the Red Queen.

"Well," said the Hatter, "when Wall Street expects something to happen and that something does happen, Wall Street acts as if it hadn't happened. People sell the stocks they've bought and buy the stocks they've sold."

"They undo what they've done?" Alice asked, bewildered.

"Yes."

"What a way to make a living!" said the White Queen.

THE MAD HATTER continued: "On the other hand, when something happens that the market hadn't expected to happen, then the market acts as if the thing that happened happened. That's called 'undiscounting.'"

"Come here," shouted the Red Queen imperiously. The Mad Hatter approached her. She held out her scepter. "Bend down," she ordered. The Mad Hatter bent down. "You're a knight," she declared and tappend him gently on the head. "Never, never before in history have I heard such a clear exposition of the stock market."

"It doesn't make sense to me," interposed the Carpenter. "I'd think that there'd always be some people thinking that what was going to happen wouldn't happen. And there'd be still other people thinking that what wouldn't happen would happen. So you'd get a stalemate."

The Mad Hatter said: "Exactly, exactly. The discounters discount the discounters."

The Carpenter said, "What?" He felt weak.

"Look," said the Hatter. He unfurled a chart of the Dow-Jones industrial stocks. He used the Red Queen's scepter as a pointer. "Here's where stocks are now, around 180. Back in 1946 they were down to 163. Last year they got as high as 193. Now they're almost in the middle. A perfect stalemate."

ALICE'S FACE broke into a smile—as if light dawned. "So, Wall Streeters are just a bunch of chess players pushing stocks around!"

"That's it," elatedly cried the Mad Hatter. A dumb student had finally caught on. "It works like this: Investor A figures taxes are going to cut earnings. He sells his U. S. Steel, duPont, and Northern Pacific. But Investor B figures that even if earnings drop, dividend payments will be liberal. He buys.

"Investor C feels certain that we're going to have a postwar readjustment in business. But Invester D, having read the President's Economic Report, is absolutely certain that the Administration won't permit a decline to go far.

"Invester E is just as certain we're headed into more inflation, which will cause the cost of living to rise, a fourth round of wage increases, and a drop in profits because in a buyer's market corporations won't be able to raise prices. Investor F knows that inflation will ultimately find its way into stock prices.

"Investor G remembers President Truman's campaign description of Wall Streeters as 'gluttons of privilege'; he fears that the rise of the labor unions will put a long-term squeeze on corporations and that the Administration will do the same. But Investor H is just as sure that in this postwar world of ours—with a national income of 215 billions—stocks have discounted pretty nearly everything, including war with Russia." The Mad Hatter paused for breath.

"Do they think like that in Wall Street?" asked Alice.

"Yes, indeed," said the Mad Hatter. "They're thinking all the time. Each investor or speculator tries to figure out what each other investor or speculator is going to do and then does just the opposite. He's sure the other guy—the public—is wrong."

"But isn't he the public too?" asked the Red Queen.

"Oh, no! The other guy's always the public. Each investor is sure he, personally, is an insider. But I'm not halfway through the investor alphabet," said the Mad Hatter.

"No more of that," commanded the Red Queen. "Answer this question: What does it all prove?"

"That's easy," said the Hatter. "If you think long enough and hard enough about anything you simply can't make up your mind. That's Wall Street."

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Jan. 13 (AP).—Pressure against all fats and oils was reflected in another downturn in soybeans and lard on the Board of Trade today. All lard deliveries reached new seasonal lows, as did July soybeans. Grains dropped for losses running to nearly 2 cents.

It was a weak market right from the start, and it never took on any show of strength. The only buying of importance came in wheat early in the day, when mills took a fair quantity of offerings. But even that was not enough to do more than slacken the downturn.

Wheat closed 1⅛@1¼ lower, corn was 1⅛@1⅜ lower, oats were 3/8@1⅜ lower, rye was 2½@2⅝ lower, soybeans were 3 to 4 cents lower and lard was 30 to 47 cents a hundred pounds lower. Final prices were at the day's lows.

Crude vegetable oils were quoted ¼ to 1 cent a pound lower in spot markets. Philippine copra dropped $10 a ton, down $65 so far this week. Trade sources said soybean oil was moving slowly, although demand for bean meal was holding up well. Cash soybean demand was slow.

Woman Saved From Crash in Which 3 Died

Tehachapi, Calif., Jan. 13 (U.P.).—A 24-year-old woman, barely consciqus after five days in subfreezing temperatures, was rescued today from the wreck of a private plane. Her husband and two others were killed in the crash on snow-clad Bear Mountain.

Mrs. Andrew de Freitas, 24, Burbank, Calif., was brought out on a stretcher by a rescue party led by Dr. Robert Dykes, Taft, Calif., who had insisted on continuing the search because two years ago he and his wife survived five days in a similar wreck in Utah Mountains.

The pilot, Robert Gloe, 30, had parachuted to the Dykes with medicine and supplies after attempts to reach them afoot had failed.

Mrs. de Freitas was in serious condition. Killed with Gloe were Andrew de Freitas, 27, and Mrs. Eve Williams, 23.

Reporting by radio, Dr. Dykes said she suffered fractures of both legs and one arm, a broken jaw and several fractured ribs.

Groups Plan Trip Here for GI's Relatives

Three Rivers, Tex., Jan. 13 (AP). Several Latin-American organizations plan to raise money to send the mother of Felix Longoria, Latin-American veterans killed in World War II, to his reburial services in Arlington National Cemetery.

Plans for reburial in Arlington were made after reports that a south Texas funeral home had refused its services for reinterment.

The manager of the establishment denied, however, that he had refused to handle the service. He said he had "discouraged" use of the chapel because of reported friction among members of the family and that there was "no question whatever of discrimination."

Dr. Hector Garcia, president of the American GI Forum in Corpus Christi, said today the Forum and Lulac groups in Corpus Christi, Robstown, Beeville, Kingsville and Alice would raise the money.

A Three Rivers group will send two other members of the family, including the widow, Beatrice, to the services. The third member, who probably will be a brother, Guadalupe, jr., has not been selected. The mother is Mrs. Guadalupe Longoria of Three Rivers.

Lieut. Col. S. H. Partridge, commanding officer of the Graves Registration Unit at the Forth Worth Quartermaster Depot, said he had received a wire request from the soldier's widow for reburial of her husband in Arlington National Cemetery. He said the request was forwarded to the Washington quartermaster for routine approval.

Last night the manager of the Rice funeral home here said he had not refused to handle the reburial service for the Latin-American soldier.

The grand prize for radio programs in a general family classification has been awarded to the Hecht Co., for its "Community Reporter" broadcast, officials of the National Retail Dry Goods Association, announced yesterday.

Winner over several hundred radio programs entered by the country's retailers in the NRDGA competition, the award, a certificate of merit, was presented to James Rotto, sales director of the Hecht Co., at the association's convention in New York.

The program, "Community Reporter" is broadcast daily over WGAY, Silver Spring, and is conducted by Ernest Tannen. The program content is designed to inform residents of Montgomery and Prince Georges counties of civic affairs in the locality and features interviews with government and civic leaders.

Ruml Says Taxes Should Be Cut, In View of Outlook

Atlantic City, N. J., Jan. 13 (NYHT).—Beardsley Ruml, chairman of the board of R. H. Macy & Co., said today that taxes should be cut this year.

"In view of the economic outlook and the budget requirements as presented, no convincing case has been made for an increase in taxation," he said at the annual convention of the National American Wholesale Grocers Association here.

"Indeed, there is room for some adjustment downward, at least in excise taxes, which are inequitable and which bear unevenly on business enterprise," Ruml added.

He again called for use of the consolidated cash budget when determining deficit and surplus.

Slayer of Schoolgirl Gets Death Penalty

Woodbury, N. J., Jan. 13 (AP).—A jury of 10 women and two men today found 37-year-old Alfred H. Collins guilty of murder in the first degree in the death of Alberta Sharp, 16-year-old Pitman, N. J., high school student.

The verdict, with no recommendation for mercy, was returned after an hour and five minutes of deliberation.

Judge John B. Wick immediately sent Collins, a Negro, to the New Jersey State Prison at Trenton to await execution the week of February 20.

Jury Questions Ex-Baltimore Engineer

New York, Jan. 13 (NYHT).—A Felix A. Inslerman lived in 1937 and 1938 at 2113 Callow ave., Baltimore, that city's telephone directories showed, it was learned today. It was to that address and during those years, that on at least one occasion, Whittaker Chambers has testified, that he went to visit a "Felix."

Chambers also has testified that he brought filched State Department documents to Baltimore, where he met "Felix," and gave the documents to him to be photographed. Other exchanges of papers also took place in Baltimore between Mr. Chambers and "Felix" when Mr. Chambers was a Communist courier, he has testified.

One of the grand jury witnesses today was Felix August Inslerman, who has admitted that he lived in Baltimore in 1937 and 1938, working there for the Dakko Co., manufacturers of photo enlargers.

Inslerman, an electrical engineer on leave from General Electric in Schenectady, has told reporters on two occasions that the fact that his first name is Felix happens to be just a coincidence with the "Felix" mentioned by Chambers. But he has refused to say just where he lived in Baltimore.

Chambers, former Communist courier, had testified before the preceding grand jury that Alger Hiss, former State Department official who was indicted on two counts of perjury, suplied him with classified documents. These papers, Chambers told the House Committee on Un-American Activities, he (Chambers) brought to "Felix," a photographic expert, who put them on microfilm. The films subsequently were found in a pumpkin on Chambers' farm.

Bar Asks Lane to Name Either Dorsey or Digges

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 13 (AP).—The State Bar Association has asked Governor Lane to name either Philipp H. Dorsey jr. or J. Dudley Digges as an associate judge of the Seventh Judicial Circuit, the State House said today.

Chief Judge William M. Loker of Leonardtown reaches the retirement age of 70 on February 11, when a successor to be appointed by Lane will take his place on the bench.

Dorsey, 47, is people's counsel for the State Public Service Commission. His home is at Leonardtown. Digges, 37, is a law partner of Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer (D., Md.) at Upper Marlboro. He lives at La Plata.

Lesinski Hit By Hoffmann

By The Associated Press

Representative Clare E. Hoffman (R., Mich.), yesterday told the House he may ask it to "censure or expel" Representative John Lesinski (D., Mich.).

Hoffman said that Lesinski had called him "a pimp of Joe Stalin," according to a story appearing in a Michigan newspaper.

The clash grew out of Hoffman's one-man congressional committee investigation into the picket line violence at the Shakespeare Co., Kalamazoo, Mich., on December 1.

Hoffman, following an exchange with House Democratic Leader McCormack (Mass.), said he would withdraw the censure resolution at this time, but did not close the door against submitting the resolution at another time.

Speaker Sam Rayburn ruled that a resolution of censure had not been laid formally before the House. This ended it.

Facing Hoffman across the well of the House, Lesinski admitted that he had said, at a Kalamazoo labor meeting on December 13, that Hoffman "had no more authority than a rabbit" to conduct the Kalamazoo investigation.

"Didn't you say," Hoffman demanded, "that Hoffman is a pimp of Joe Stalin, a prostitute?"

The House and galleries broke into laughter at Lesinski's reply: "That is not the way I said it. I said, to me, that is what Hitler tried to do in Germany and that to me Hitler is just a pimp of Joe Stalin."

Sawyer Favors Tax Laws to Aid Small Business

Richmond, Va., Jan. 13 (AP).—Secretary of Commerce Charles Sawyer indicated here tonight he would be receptive to some tax law revisions that would give smoother sailing to the small business man just getting his start.

He gave no indication, however, in a speech prepared for delivery before the Richmond Chamber of Commerce as to how this type of tax revision would conform with the President's call for a four-billion dollar boost in taxes.

The secretary touched on the subject in a speech that praised the American system of competitive business and contrasted it with Marxism and Communism.

'We feel . . . that some changes in our tax laws may be necessary," the secretary said, "to reduce the financial risks of a small business venture during the first years of its existence.

"This is a problem that requires careful study.'

Beachwear Goes Down to Sea to Be Seen

Daring or Conservative, There's News for You

By Peggy Preston

NEW YORK, N. Y., Jan. 13.—"Will you swim, madame, or sit this one out?"

You'll know the answer by what part or parts of her beach ensemble the gal is wearing this summer, judging by the outfits being shown at the New York Dress Institute's fashion shows here this week.

She'll appear at the cabana swathed in many yards of cotton, looking demure enough to take out her knitting. Then, presto! Off comes the skirt and bolero jacket, and she is charming in a little skirted suit, just right for sunning. But when she prepares to go near the water . . . off flies the detachable skirt and what's left is hardly enough to mention . . . or to swim in for that matter.

To give credit where credit is due, the California designers have been talking up this type of suit for the last year. But somehow it took such an Eastern specialist as Claire McCardell to really impress us. One of the costumes she recommends for a dip is pictured here. Like all of her designs, it is created for the young of heart and figure. Miss Average America will have to be satisfied with something less revealing. She won't have trouble finding it, for there will be plenty of conservative bathing suits this year, just as in the past. The wise woman picks the suit for her figure and not for fashion.

MISS PRESTON

But Miss McCardell has founded her excellent reputation on her ability to design for the college youngster and the under-25-year-old career girl. Since these are the lassies who shine on the beaches, it seems fitting here to give her first place in the beachwear and play clothes division for this season.

The McCardell line was shown yesterday, and as usual, was met with applause from the fashion critics. She has a million cute tricks, this McCardell gal. Her "spectacles swim suit" has been done before, but not in the snappy green silk shantung which she suggests. Pleated bloomer pants go along with it. Other bathing suits come in cracker-crepe, a crinkly, quick-drying nylon. These are brief as possible with bow-tied diaper pants and halter bra slashed and wired in a spreading V. There is also a bloomer bathing suit that is a honey, made of red-dotted tie-twill with a red wool jersey cape that is "sleeved" with little gold catches at the wrist.

In the remainder of her line, ranging from morning to late evening attire, McCardell remains true to the silhouette she practically created: the small bodice, with sloping shoulders and slashed V-neckline; the big skirt and the waistline pointed up with a wide, long sash, boned to stay up in the center front.

McCardell fans will dote on her built-up waist bands on suit skirts. They'll revel in her use of elasticized wool knit and her wide leather belts.

Clare Potter, designing for the Charles W. Nudelman collection, also turned up with a delightful show of resort and beach wear yesterday. A bit more well-mannered than the playful Miss McCardell's, the suits had plenty of style, nevertheless.

Both her swim suits and sun dresses have bare-topped bodices in the best 1949 manner. Her suits, as a rule, are of navy or black taffeta; the sundresses of pure linen with cover-up boleros to match. One of emerald green, has a slim, wrapped skirt that flares in back and boasts a tremendous free-swimming pocket on one side.

She does lots of cute little weskits, handknit in Britain, and topping many of her circular linen skirts.

Also tops on yesterday's docket were the coat and suit collections shown by two outstanding firms in that field: Deitsch, Wersba & Coppola and Zuckerman & Kraus. We hope to tell you in detail of these later. Crowding the schedule were several hat shows. Outstanding were those of Lilly Dache and Laddie Northridge. In between times we caught a cosmetic show and one on lingerie.

Friday we will take a long look at the Christian Dior collection and give you a full report in Saturday's Washington Post. We understand there is some interesting news in hemline lengths in the Dior designs which the Frenchman has created especially for the American market.

CLARE POTTER'S sundress of bright green Irish linen features enormous loose-hanging pockets

CLAIRE McCARDELL suggests "the very bare look" in bathing suits as the latest trend in summer fashions. Miss McCardell, known for her casual beach and play clothes, introduced this bathing outfit consisting of brief, pleated bright green silk shantung bloomers and a "breast-plate" bra that is two discs held on by a narrow string, at the New York Dress Institute fashion showings

Meats, Especially Pork, Are Best Buying Bets, As Weather Hikes Prices

By Lucia Brown

FRESH PORK and certain cuts of beef are the standout buys on the meat market this third week-end in January, 1949.

It's the peak of the season for pork and plenty of beef is coming to the butcher's counter, too. Prices on both are lower than at this time last year. Washington stores are running week-end "specials" on such cuts as pork roasts and chops, beef steaks and chuck roast. Veal, on the other hand, remains high, and there's little change in the price of lamb or smoked pork.

Eggs are becoming a better buy as the hens catch an early whiff of spring in the air. The wholesale price has dropped about five cents since the first of the year. Prices on such nuts as pecans, filberts, and walnuts have fallen since the holiday season, too, making an extra good buy for cake, salad, and dessert making.

The fruit and vegetable market is suffering badly from the freeze in the West. You'll see a difference in lemon prices, particularly, this week-end. All our lemons come from California at this time of year, so the price has been hiked sharply by the destruction of fruit out there. Orange prices are moving up more gradually, but the cost of grapefruit—coming on from Florida and Texas—hasn't been affected much so far.

MISS BROWN

Iceberg lettuce is arriving with leaf tips frosted and the price is higher. Celery prices are up, too, and squash and eggplant are twice what they were at wholesale a month ago. Cauliflower, broccoli, Brussels sprouts, and artichoke prices are all stepped up by the freeze in the Western market garden country. Green beans are a little higher, spinach has advanced, and peppers are scarce and high.

About the only cheap vegetables on the market now are winter greens, such as collards, cabbage, kale, and the root vegetables. So if you're pennywise, you'll take a leaf from grandmother's book and serve such things as turnips, onions, carrots, and cooked greens these January days.

Making the Most of the Market

HERE are main dish recipes that make the most of three of this week-end's good buys—chuck roast, pork chops, and eggs. Baked Fruited Pork Chops is a dish that spreads the rich pork flavor by combining it with apples and raisins. Dutch Pot Roast will be enjoyed by your family if they like a little touch of sour cream in their cooking. And Eggs New Orleans is a colorful casserole that combines tomatoes, celery, and cheese, with the eggs.

Baked Fruited Pork Chops

6 loin or rib pork chops
Flour, salt, and paprika
½ cup raisins
3 cooking apples
Brown sugar

Dredge pork chops with flour and brown thoroughly on both sides in 3 tablespoons hot lard or other fat. Sprinkle each side with salt and paprika. Core apples, but do not pare. Cut into thick slices. Place chops in baking dish or leave in skillet. Pour off excess fat. Scatter a few raisins over each chop, top with slices of apple, and sprinkle with brown sugar. Pour ¼ cup water around chops, cover, and bake in moderate oven, 350 degrees Fahrenheit, for 45 minutes or until tender. Baste once or twice during baking with liquid in pan. (Chops also may be cooked in a covered skillet on top of the stove

Sees World Looking to U. S. on Human Rights

UN Declaration Aid to Peace, Mrs. Roosevelt Says

By Genevieve Reynolds

Public opinion will determine whether or not the United States ratifies the covenant of the Declaration of Human Rights, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt told members of the Women's National Press Club and their guests yesterday when she appeared as guest of honor and speaker, at luncheon in the Statler Hotel.

The former First Lady, now chairman of the U. N. Commission on Human Rights, said that if the United States fails to ratify the document other nations will say, "Why should we?"

"I hope we will be prepared to consider and ratify the covenant when it is prepared," she declared.

No laws would have to be passed or changed to put the U. N. declaration into effect, she explained, but the United States would be up against discriminations when it comes to living up to the covenant which would have the legality of a treaty.

Individuals and groups can prepare a climate for ratification by educating the public on the contents and meanings of the declaration, according to Mrs. Roosevelt. "It would be well to point out to people and groups how the declaration evolved through compromises," she explained, "and how foolish it would be for everybody to think all peoples and nations must think exactly as we in the United States."

Implementing Declaration

Mrs. Roosevelt said that many suggestions had been offered for implementing the U. N. declaration and covenant, such as the Australian plan to set up a court of human rights, and others to establish an international court of rights to set up a panel to listen to certain petitions or a panel of conciliators.

When asked to comment on the Australian suggestion during the question-answer period, she replied, "I think the Australian one would be the most difficult of all to have accepted by all the Nations."

Pointing out that six of the eight nations who abstained from voting for the U. N. Rights Declaration were the USSR and its satellites, Mrs. Roosevelt said that Russia contended that the document harked back to the eighteenth century and failed to provide for implementation.

"From Vishinsky's speech, it was clear the Soviet meant national, not international, implementation," she observed. "His and the Soviet's interpretation meant guarantees by the state, or according to state regulations."

"For example, the clause dealing with freedom of movement within a country, and the freedom to leave and return to a country was unacceptable to the Soviet except when stipulated according to state regulations," Mrs. Roosevelt added.

Asked if she thought she had made any progress with the Russians, the former President's widow answered, "None except in understanding at last that you can't talk with them as person to person, individual to individual, but must talk with them as representatives of their government."

She said that she was not worried too much by the Iron Curtain because "the grapevine

Step-by-Step Bath Routine A Pleasure

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

There is a real satisfaction for the mother in freeing the baby from his damp, wrinkled clothes each day and treating him to a welcome bath, with the cleansing offices of soap and water and fragrant oil or powder afterwards.

Bath tables are ideal for giving the bath, as the baby is safe and firmly held in one hand, and the mother need not lean over to bathe him. But, barring these, a bed or a table will do if padded with a soft towel and the mother takes care not to leave the baby alone on it, from which he might roll off with devastating consequences.

Gather all the toilet articles and have the water in the tub before undressing the baby. Strip him of clothes and wrap him in a large turkish towel. Use a bath apron of the same type of fabric to protect the mother's dress and make a nice lap for drying the wet baby.

Use a bath thermometer and have the water at 98 to 100 degrees by it. Otherwise use the bare elbow, plunge it deep in the water and judge it to be right if it feels comfortably warm but not hot.

Wipe the crusts from baby's nose with a cotton-wrapped toothpick dipped in baby oil.

Use two separate bits of cotton dipped in plain water or boric acid solution and wipe out each eye. If there is any secretion which looks like pus let the doctor tell you how to deal with it.

With cotton-wrapped toothpick dipped in oil or plain water wipe around the convolutions of the ear, paying attention to the crease behind it. Wipe off with dry towel. Do not do anything to the inside of the ear or the inside of the mouth.

Soap a soft washcloth and wash the head well, not pussyfooting over the soft spot, which needs vigorous cleaning to prevent a collection of dirt and oily scales. Rinse by pouring water from the tub over it. Dry with warm towel.

Soap the baby all over, hold him with your left hand on his thigh, his head resting on left arm. Rinse him off quickly and lift him out onto a dry towel. Pat dry and oil or powder the creases of the legs.

The Family Scrapbook

Hazards of a First Child

It seems to be common for eager and earnest young parents to set very high standards for their first child. When I've discussed this in parent groups and mentioned how much more relaxed we usually are with children that follow, there are frequently many understanding smiles.

Probably part of the cause for this is our anxiety to prove that we can do a good job. Another factor is lack of experience. We haven't learned through our own contacts with babies that they can take a lot. Whether they are always spic and span doesn't make so much difference. It won't even matter much if routines aren't kept too strictly as long as the infant seems to be happy with what is happening. But it takes experience to teach us this. Our first efforts at bringing up a baby are deadly serious. We want our particular offspring to be treated as nearly perfectly as possible.

One can hope that some people can learn from others' experiences, though this doesn't happen too often. To prospective parents, then, those of you who are eagerly waiting your first youngster, we old experienced fathers and mothers say, "Try to enjoy your baby first of all. Don't take things too seriously. Give your child a normal amount of physical care, a lot of loving, and play down the training angle. He'll get on to that soon enough. The most important thing is to have fun and relax."

In New Place of Employment, Deserted Wife Is Thought to Be Happily Married, a Pose She Regrets as Handicap to Social Expansion

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Six months ago my husband deserted me, after nearly five years' unhappy marriage, leaving me with a small daughter to support. In emergency I returned to my family, taking the baby, and we are living with them at present.

Now I have resumed employment in a very nice establishment and am beginning to find myself again; but in process of becoming reoriented to normal living, I am beginning to realize, also, that I face a problem in my indefinable social status, being neither married nor single, in my twenties.

My immediate family and closest friends know that Ralph has deserted, bringing our marriage to an end; but until now I've merely said to casual acquaintances and business associates that my husband works out of town.

What's Good Policy in Her Situation?

I FELT this was correct procedure in the period of readjustment, especially as I thought my job and my daughter would take up most of my time, leaving little leisure for social pursuits.

However, it may take years before I can obtain a divorce, because I don't know where to locate Ralph and I'll have to save a substantial sum for legal action. Also I hope to remarry successfully some day, and I don't see how this is possible if I continue to wear my wedding ring and pose as a married woman to most of the people I meet each day.

All things considered, what do you recommend as the correct or constructive approach to a new lease on life? J. B.

Take a Tip From Naturalist

DEAR J. B.: In a mystic poem the naturalist John Burroughs said of himself, "I stay my haste; I make delays, for what avails this eager pace?" And I think you might with profit apply the same sentiment to your mounting impatience to get in line for a second husband.

You speak of your indefinable social status "of being neither married nor single,"—which is a self-deluding denial of fact. The truth is, you are a married woman, and will continue to be, according to the laws of society and the tenets of morality, until you've been granted a final decree of absolute divorce by duly constituted legal authority.

Given intrinsic dignity and the margin of reserve that goes with it, you would of course refrain (as you've nicely done) from spelling out to casual acquaintances or business associates the inside story of your current unfortunate status, which finds you without a husband's protection.

Laconic Honesty Seems Advisable

AND YET if your marriage is finished, to all intents and purposes, I think you might with perfect propriety simply say, "My husband and I have parted, permanently, and I'm living with my parents for the time being—," when you feel a precise explanation is called for; as, for instance, when you're bidding for friendship founded on good faith.

Having said that much, you need say no more; and if pressed for further details, it's correct to deflate the questioner with a brief, "I'm sorry; I don't discuss it,"—or a quiet change of subject without apology.

You've got off on the wrong foot, temporarily, in your new place of employment, by posing as a successfully married woman; and I suppose you took this tack involuntarily while still smarting from the humiliation of being deserted. Had you initiated the separation by leaving Ralph, you could have mentioned your "lorn" status more readily and comfortably.

The common sense course, it seems to me, is to be honest, though not brass-lunged about your situation; and to consult the Legal Aid Society in your community on ways and means to expedite divorce economically. M. H.

How to Meet New Neighbors

Three months ago we moved into a new home in a select but very informal neighborhood. I have met most of my neighbors informally on the street while taking my Baby out in the carriage and they have all asked me to drop in to see them. Is it customary for the prior established residents to call on their new neighbor first or should I take them up on their suggestion to call on them? Several of them have stopped in our yard to take a look at the baby, but the time happened to be inopportune so I did not ask them in. I had thought perhaps a better solution than calling on each neighbor individually would be to have a tea and invite them all over. In case you approve of that, would you suggest inviting only the ones I have met informally or also those whom I haven't had the opportunity to meet yet? R. L.

In absolutely correct social custom, your already established neighbors should have called upon you before they invited you to their homes. However, the far more customary practice these days in the type of neighborhood you describe is for new neighbors to become acquainted with old neighbors by conversations over the fence or out walking as you have done. Your idea of inviting to tea the friendly neighbors you have met is good and would be interpreted by those neighbors as the cordial gesture it is. I feel, however, that calling on or inviting to your home the ones you have not met should wait until you have had occasion to meet them as you did the others, or until you are longer established in the neighborhood.

Do you have a recipe for Jam Cake made with blackberry jam and sour milk and the layers put together with nut and date filling? J. B.

Blackberry Jam Cake

3 cups sifted all-purpose flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon baking soda
¼ teaspoon salt
3 eggs, well beaten
1 cup blackberry jam
1 cup sour milk or buttermilk
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 teaspoon cloves
2/3 cup shortening
1½ cups sugar

Sift together flour, baking powder, soda, salt and spices. Cream shortening until soft and smooth; gradually add sugar, beating until very fluffy, then beat in eggs and jam. Add flour mixture alternately with sour milk, beating until smooth after each addition. Turn into three prepared layer pans and bake in moderate oven (350 degrees) 25 to 30 minutes. Put layers together with Date and Nut filling.

Date-Nut Filling

¼ cup chopped walnuts
½ cup water
1 tablespoon orange juice

Cook together dates, walnuts and water until thick. Flavor with orange juice. Approximate yield, one cup filling.

I have just received a baby chest, unpainted, which I would like refinished to match a waxed birch crib. What is the best way to do this? P. K.

You could use one of several methods to refinish the chest. If the color of the raw wood in the chest is very near to the color of the crib, you could finish it by applying several coats of clear shellac. Or, apply four or five coats of paste wax directly to the raw wood, rubbing each coat well before the next is added. It is possible to buy wax in wood shades where automobile supplies are sold, so, if the color of the chest needs to be darkened a bit, using a wax in a color to match the crib would probably do it.

If the chest is entirely different in color than the crib, your best chance of matching them would be to use an oil stain on the chest. When it has thoroughly dried apply two coats of clear varnish. If you wish, the varnish can be rubbed down when thoroughly dry with pumice and oil to cut the shine.

When you decide which of the above methods you wish to use, try it on a small underneath area of the chest until you get a good match. You probably will not be able to buy an oil stain to exactly match the birch, but the depth of color of the stain can be governed by the length of time it is left on the wood. For a very light stain, apply it and wipe away almost immediately. You should determine just how long to leave it on when you make the test patch.

I have a good leather handbag on which the metal clasp is chipping. Do you know of any firm that could respray or otherwise refinish the clasp? M. L. M.

The clasp would have to be removed from the bag by a firm which does leather repair and then sent to a metal refinishing firm to be refinished. How they refinish it will be determined by the kind of metal which is in the clasp. If it is brass, they will polish and relacquer it. Other metals may need to be replated. I would suggest you first take it to a leather repairman to see if it can be removed without ruining the bag. He may be able to send it to the metal refinishers for you or you could find a firm which does this work by looking under "Platers" in the yellow pages of the telephone book.

Not a Canary Chirped

They Danced in Overcoats At Icy 'Muslin Palace' For Grant's Inaugural

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

THERE'S NOTHING like a blizzard to gum up an inaugural. With storms sweeping Capitolwards from sunny California, we've delved some entertaining facts of past, snowbound Inaugurals.

Most catastrophic was General Grant's second inaugural on March 4, 1877. The thermometer fell to 4 above zero; stinging winds whipped decorations from reviewing stands and the general, minus accommodating microphone, chopped his address short, since the audience couldn't hear a word.

Scores of parading soldiers and civilians, too numb to parade, fell out of line, were carted off in ambulances. Half the grandstand spectators along the route deserted their expensive seats, scurried indoors. But tough Ulysses S. Grant drove to the Capitol in an open carriage, while the Vice President and the Grant family, cocooned in furs, followed shivering suit.

THE INAUGURAL BALL, planned to surpass all previous functions, took place in a building specially erected for the occasion in Judiciary Square. The largest room was 300 feet in length, 150 in width, and though it was constructed to be impervious to vibrations from thousands of dancing feet, it had not been built to withstand almost zero weather—and icy draughts whistled through the leaky structure. The unfinished board walls were hung from ceiling to floor with white cloth. Some wag nicknamed it "the Muslin Palace."

From the center ceiling hung a giant American eagle with wings outspread.

"In his talons he held the shield of the United States, and streamers of the National colors 100 feet long radiated to every part of the hall, and terminated at the arches with coats of arms of the States. The walls, ceilings, arches and columns were lined and covered with white muslin and trimmed with flags, shields, bunting, rosettes of the National colors and evergreens."

The platform where the President received was backed by a mass of lights, set in the form of a rising sun which, enlarged by reflectors, beamed with what must have been blinding brilliance.

THE NIFTIEST idea of the resourceful decorators, however, was canaries! Hundreds of caged rollers were strong around the hall. Supposed to burst into song on cue, "their singing was planned to be a striking part of the welcome to the presidential party." The poor birds never uttered a peep, even when the Marine Band struck up the traditional "Hail to the Chief." They huddled, head under wings, at the bottom of their cages trying desperately to generate heat.

The presidential party, keeping a stiff upper lip, sat on the platform muffled to the eyebrows. Only the White House daughter, pretty Nellie Grant, who'd been too young to attend her father's first Inaugural Ball, couldn't resist showing off her finery. For a brief moment, the half frozen guests were gratified to glimpse her "dainty white illusion dress with its lavish trimmings of white flowers."

On the chilly floor, the dancers whirled to keep up circulation, the gentlemen in overcoats, the ladies covering flounced farthingales with pelisses and tippets.

Big moment of the evening was the serving of a hot supper, but this pleasure was decidedly mitigated when it was discovered that all the champagne was frozen solid. One newspaper added a wistful comment: "ice cream was not in demand." Later, the contemporary equivalent of today's columnists coined a neat phrase, dubbed the extraordinary evening "A Frosty Horror!"

Big Blowout Ends With Driver Untired

Reporter Marshall Andrews was following a truck down 14th st. toward Virginia yesterday, and noticed that it was carrying a huge load of discarded auto tires.

As he was marveling at the size of the load, he heard a loud BANG, and then the truck went limping over to the side of the road.

DOG'S LIFE

Shipping a dog to Seattle takes a bit of doing, according to Lieut. E. A. Davidson, USN, of 5712 63d ave., East Riverdale, Md. (Union 4206.)

Lieutenant Davidson wants to send a cocker spaniel pup to the West Coast. But he finds that, by train, the dog would have to remain in a crate for a week.

And he's not acceptable as air "freight," because he'd be shipped in an unheated plane—and in this weather, that ain't good.

So there's only one solution: An airlines passenger could take him along as "excess baggage," and park him in a baggage compartment which is heated.

LONG WAIT

"I stole one of your bus-stop signs six years ago. Now I want to return it."

He was advised to call the dispatcher's office and make arrangements for returning the stolen sign. But the dispatcher waited in vain for the call.

Instead, the next thing the transit people heard about their missing sign was a report from a woman on Irving st. nw.

"There's a bus-stop sign on my lawn," she said. "I don't know how it got there, but if you want it you can come and get it."

A bit wearily, Capital Transit came and fetched the sign. To this moment they still don't know where it was stolen from, when, by whom—or for what purpose.

Apparently some quixotic soul just wanted a bus stop of his own, and after waiting for six years for a bus that never came, decided the idea was impractical.

PERSONAL NOTES

Mrs. Luella M. Moyer, 4211 8th st. nw.: Good catch. But I plead not guilty.

Mrs. E. C. Turney, 9523 Bruce dr., Silver Spring, Md.: Yes, I know the daffodils are coming up. As a matter of fact, I made a reference to it in my item about the dog that wandered off from the Swiss Legation Thursday, because the pup loved to sniff the flowers brought on by our "unseasonably mild weather."

I should have known better. Between the time I wrote the item and the time it was set in type a few hours later, snow had started to fall.

FOR DEMOCRATS ONLY

The Inaugural Committee's Housing Bureau has been distributing registration blanks, to be filled out by folks who have rooms available for out-of-town visitors.

Ordinarily, when the blanks are returned to the bureau, they're very businesslike, and very properly give the needed information.

But every so often a comedian's handiwork turns up. Like the registration yesterday which purported to come from "Thomas E. Dewey."

The quarters available for rental were listed as "1600 Pennsylvania ave. nw." The number of rooms: "all." Price: "Very cheap."

And down below was the explanation: "Had anticipated using for my own occupancy for the next four years, but was unavoidably detained in Albany."

NEW YORK—Eddie Jacobson, the haberdasher who once was President Truman's partner, was persuaded by Herbert Mayes, the magazine editor, to tell the full story of their association. Mayes will publish it in Cosmopolitan next month, under the title "Truman Was My Partner." Elliott Roosevelt's hospitalization and operation were for the removal of a cyst.

Irwin Shaw, author of "The Young Lions," sails for Europe shortly on a six-month assignment from Holiday magazine . . . Rosselini, the Italian film director whose services are sought after by every studio in Hollywood, arrives here on Sunday—his first trip to America. He will confer here with his producer, I. Lopert . . . Robert E. Sherwood can barely move around in his Sutton Place apartment because of the Roosevelt-Hopkins files which still are there. Sherwood had to move out much of his household furniture and place it in storage to make room for these files. Their disposition will depend on the wishes of Hopkins' heirs and the Roosevelt Library at Hyde Park.

Martha Gellhorn, the author-correspondent and former wife of Ernest Hemingway, is taking up residence in Mexico City. This will eliminate Mexico from the travel routes planned by Frank Coniff, who won a decoration for his life-saving exploits on the Elbe River when he was a correspondent during the war. When Coniff returned to Paris for a rest he went to the Scribe Bar, where the newspapermen gathered—and there he beheld the attractive Miss Gellhorn who was completely surrounded by two 6-foot English naval officers. Coniff found an opening and whispered to her, "Get rid of these two jerks and I'll meet you later" . . . Miss Gellhorn turned to her giant companions and in honied tones which made Coniff retire, asked them, "What does that mean—two jerks?"

Milton Berle, television's No. 1 star, has received offers from every major movie studio, to head their television departments. The material used by Berle on his television show now is the same material he used in his screen test for 20th Century-Fox, the studio which dropped his option.

Langer Probes Waves Uniforms

By Drew Pearson

North Dakota's Senator Langer, who forced the Navy to reconsider the outmoded uniforms of Navy enlisted men, has now been checking into the high price of Waves' uniforms. He is also interested in the fact that Waves' clothes were patterned by Mrs. James Forrestal and one of New York's ritziest designers, formerly associated with her.

LANGER

Senator Langer points out that at a time when the Navy is making the Waves a permanent part of the armed forces, it supplies free uniforms to enlisted men, but requires the Waves to buy their clothing out of a meager $264 allowance.

What also interests Senator Langer is how the Wave uniforms happened to be executed by Mainbocher, whose speciality is selling gowns to the Duchess of Windsor and other ladies along Park ave. Mainbocher (real name Lou Main Bocher) was former editor of Vogue Magazine when Josephine Ogden, now Josephine Forrestal, was Vogue's fashion editor.

Before the war, Mainbocher was the rave designer of Paris. But with the outbreak of war he returned to the United States, and in 1942 combined with Mrs. Forrestal to turn out the first Wave uniform. Inquiry at the Navy reveals that Mainbocher was not paid for his services, and that the Navy also considers the cost of Wave clothing strictly bargain-basement rates, in view of the fact that Mainbocher sells ladies' dresses at $600 up.

High Price of Blues

The Forrestal-Mainbocher hats designed for the Waves cost the Waves $21 each, which some of the girls consider more in keeping with Mainbocher's Duchess of Windsor clientele. Out of the $264 allowance, a Wave has to buy a $33.10 Mainbocher raincoat, a $33.30 Mainbocher overcoat, a $13.90 Mainbocher blouse, plus such accessories as underthings, hosiery, gloves, shoes, purses and, of course, makeup.

When the announcement of these prices was first made by Wave Commandant Captain W. Underwood, now retired, she remarked ruefully: "Nothing is furnished but the money, and not too much of that."

Senator Langer contends that there is no reason why enlisted women should be discriminated against, and that since the sailors and soldiers get free uniforms, Waves should be treated likewise.

GOP Election Plans

Minutes of the secret Republican conference: Senator Owen Brewster of Maine urged GOP colleagues to start campaigning now for 1950. Though it is customary for the Senatorial Campaign Committee to lay dormant for six months, Brewster warned that it must be put into gear without pause for the two-year stretch ahead.

Senator Irving Ives of New York suggested it was more important for the Republicans to worry about making a record in the present Congress. He urged that they start off by fighting for a rules change in the Senate to break up filibusters. The Republicans had promised to make this the first order of business in January, anyway, he reminded them.

Balance of the time was taken up straightening out committee assignments. Senators Robert A. Taft of Ohio and Hugh Butler of Nebraska waived their seniority to allow Colorado's Eugene Millikin to be listed as first-ranking Republican on the Finance Committee—but only for two years. Senator Chan Gurney of South Dakota reported that New Hampshire's Senator Styles Bridges had agreed to let him continue as Republican spokesman on the Armed Services Committee, though they hadn't settled who should be listed first on the committee roster. This decision was put off until Bridges returned from New Hampshire.

Senator Arthur Vandenberg announced that he had an unusual request to make. He wanted to drop all seniority rights on the Expenditures Committee, and be listed permanently at the bottom of the committee. He intended to devote his main attention, he explained, to foreign relations.

Merry-Go-Round

It's going to be O. K. for Pennsylvania's Hugh Scott to remain on as GOP National Chairman. Though Scott's a Dewey man, Congressman Clarence Brown, a Taft man, has refused to lead a fight against him . . . Colleagues want Scott to resign from Congress, however, so he can devote full time to rebuilding the party . . . Looks like Arkansas, not Missouri, was now running the Nation. Latest Arkansan to step into the seat of the mighty is Frank Pace as Director of the Budget. Pace will have almost life-and-death power over many Government bureaus . . . Other Arkansans who sit in the seats of the mighty are: Secretary of the Treasury John Snyder, Leslie Biffle, Senate Secretary, and Truman's closest adviser, and John Steelman, Administrative Assistant to the President.

New 87-Vote Senator

Texas' newly elected Senator Lyndon Johnson is by no means new to Washington, but whether new or old, his colleagues agree, he will be an asset.

The lanky, soft-spoken Texan was elected despite one of the worst mudslinging campaigns in the stormy history of Texas politics, in which the mud was bought and paid for by the oil lobby. Johnson was chairman of the House subcommittee that forced California Standard Oil to give Elk Hills back to the Government, and the oil boys have been waiting to get even ever since.

They fought him first in the Democratic primary, then subsidized his opponent, former Gov. Coke Stevenson, in the runoff. (Stevenson had renewed a valuable lease with Magnolia Oil Co. only last summer.) Then, when Johnson won the nomination by an 87-vote margin, the lobby—most of its members Democrats—threw their weight to the Republicans. The oil lobby not only went over the legal limit in campaign contributions against Johnson, but did its politicking through a dummy corporation, despite the fact that it's illegal for any corporation to contribute to a political campaign.

The dummy corporation was called Honesty, Inc., but was almost laughed out of business when Neal Campbell, formerly indicted for embezzlement, was picked to
